Spaces in Architecture Bert Bielefeld,2019-04-01 The design of a building is a complex process in which the architect develops spaces which are defined by a number of different parameters The most important of these are space requirements distances furniture and fittings and movement zones From the dimensions of the human body it is possible to derive guide values for these reference sizes that make spaces comfortable to be in and to use Spaces in Architecture is a useful reference work for students and designers for quickly looking up detailed information on space scenarios that occur in many different types of buildings For example the book lists all important dimensions for entrance areas doors staircases ramps and elevators On the basis of this fundamental information it is possible to design buildings in terms of function and type

Future Cities ECAADE (Association),2010 Future Cities For the first time in human history more than 50% of the world's population lives in urban regions Cities are the largest most complex and most dynamic man made systems They are vibrant centers of cultural life and engines that drive the global economy Contemporary cities are environmentally socially and economically unsustainable The quality of urban life is threatened by such factors as pollution rising temperatures limited resources congestion social inequalities aging of large sectors of the world population poverty informality crime and economic imbalances The overall planning of future cities is a challenge that can only be faced by interdisciplinary teams combining multitudes of backgrounds and expertise eCAADe Education and Research in Computer Aided Architectural Design in Europe eCAADe covers Europe Middle East North Africa and Western Asia and works in collaboration with the four other major international associations in the field ACADIA ASCAAD CAADRIA CAADFutures and SIGRADI eCAADe has collaborated with these associations to devise an exciting international Journal for the field called the International Journal of Architectural Computing or short IJAC

The Democratic Courthouse Linda Mulcahy, Emma Rowden, 2019-09-20 The Democratic Courthouse examines how changing understandings of the relationship between government and the governed came to be reflected in the buildings designed to house the modern legal system from the 1970s to the present day in England and Wales The book explores the extent to which egalitarian ideals and the pursuit of new social and economic rights altered existing hierarchies and expectations about how people should interact with each other in the courthouse Drawing on extensive public archives and private archives kept by the Ministry of Justice but also using case studies from other jurisdictions the book details how civil servants judges lawyers architects engineers and security experts have talked about courthouses and the people that populate them In doing so it uncovers a changing history of ideas about how the competing goals of transparency majesty participation security fairness and authority have been achieved and the extent to which aspirations towards equality and participation have been realised in physical form As this book demonstrates the power of architecture to frame attitudes and expectations of the justice system is much more than an aesthetic or theoretical nicety Legal subjects live in a world in which the configuration of space the cues provided about behaviour by the built form and the way in which justice is symbolised play a crucial but largely unacknowledged role in creating meaning and constituting legal identities and rights to participate in the civic sphere Key to understanding the modern day courthouse this book will be of interest to scholars and students in all fields of law architecture sociology political science psychology and criminology
