

Objectives- By the end of this week you should be able to: (Many of these will be review from Honors Biology. Objectives in bold are new or done in more detail.)

1. Describe the favored model of heredity in the 19th century prior to Mendel.
Explain how Mendel's hypothesis of inheritance differed from the blending theory of inheritance.
3. Define true breeding, hybridization, monohybrid cross, P generation, F1 generation, and F2 generation.
4. Use a Punnett square to predict the results of a monohybrid and dihybrid crosses and state the phenotypic and genotypic ratios of the F2 generation for each.
5. Distinguish between the following pairs of terms: dominant and recessive; heterozygous and homozygous; genotype and phenotype.
6. Explain how a testcross can be used to determine if a dominant phenotype is homozygous or heterozygous.
7. Define Mendel's law of independent assortment.
8. Given a Mendelian cross, use the rules of multiplication and addition to calculate the probability that a particular individual will have a certain genotype or phenotype.
9. Use the laws of probability to predict the expected proportion of offspring from a trihybrid cross between two individuals that are heterozygous for all three traits that would have a particular combination of genotypes or phenotypes.
10. Explain why Mendel was wise to use large sample sizes in his studies.
11. Give an example of incomplete dominance and explain why it is not evidence for the blending theory of inheritance.
12. Explain how the phenotypic expression of the heterozygote is affected by complete dominance, incomplete dominance, and co-dominance.
13. Explain why Tay-Sachs is considered recessive at the organismic level but co-dominant at the molecular level.
14. Explain genetic dominance in terms of functional proteins made or not made and link phenotypes to the presence or absence of these proteins.
15. Explain why dominant alleles do not necessarily mean that the allele is more common in a population. Illustrate your explanation with the character polydactyly.
16. Describe the inheritance of the ABO blood system and explain why the I^A and I^B alleles are said to be co-dominant.
17. Define, give examples of, and solve problems relating to pleiotropy and epistasis.
18. Describe a simple model for polygenic inheritance and explain why most polygenic characters are described in quantitative terms.
19. Describe how environmental conditions can influence the phenotypic expression of a character.
20. Explain why studies of human inheritance are not as easily conducted as Mendel's work with his peas.
21. Given a simple family pedigree, deduce the genotypes for some of the family members.
22. Explain how a lethal recessive gene can be maintained in a population and recognize lethal recessives from data on offspring.
23. Describe the inheritance and expression of cystic fibrosis, Tay-Sachs disease, and sickle-cell disease.
24. Explain why lethal dominant genes are much rarer than lethal recessive genes.
25. Give an example of a late-acting lethal dominant in humans and explain how it can escape elimination.
26. Explain how the observations of cytologists and geneticists provided the basis for the chromosome theory of inheritance.
27. Explain why Drosophila melanogaster is a good experimental organism.
28. Define and compare linked genes and sex-linked genes. Explain why the inheritance of linked genes is different from independent assortment.
