What do you think Simon is going to share about millennials in the workplace?	GETTING READY FOR CRITICAL THINKING Using point-form notes, record the key points that Simon makes during his interview.	START THINKING CRITICALLY What do you believe Sinek's overall goal is in this interview? Ask yourself - who is his intended audience and what is the purpose of his interview?
A British-American novelist and motivational speaker named Simon Sinek. He is most recognised for popularising the "why" idea through his TED presentations. His firm, "The Optimism Company," offers services and training to both corporations and people. Sinek is an extremely skilled writer who has released 5 novels to date. He has given motivational speeches at significant gatherings like the UN Global	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Employers ask millennials what they would like in their job and even though they are given what they requested, they are still not happy - He see the cause of this issue as a mix of four different sections <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Parenting - Technology and Social Media - Impatience - Environment - Parenting: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Simon believes that millennials were raised by "failed" parenting strategies - He goes on to explain how their parents gave them too much and complained about 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - I think that his main objective in doing this interview was to discuss the various difficulties that millennials have at work and how their upbringing leaves them unprepared for life in these corporate settings. - I feel that one of his target audiences was the generation he is talking about because he repeatedly mentions that it is not the millennials' fault throughout the speech. - Another group that I believe he was speaking to during the interview was those organisations that aren't assisting the younger generation in becoming better and more suited for
