

Exploring Kites

Flying a kite may seem like simply a fun outdoor activity for a nice day. However, kites have been used for thousands of years for practical purposes. These purposes include fishing, long distance communication, photography, and more. The kite has inspired scientific inventions such as the lightning rod and the airplane. Kites have also been used to gather data about the weather or to see how to control the weather. No matter the use, kites are an important part of the history of science, flight, and fun.

Kites typically have three main parts that make up the kite body. The kite body is the framework and outer covering or fabric. Examples of kite body types include diamond, bow, compound, delta, flat, parafoil, roller, and sail kites. Next, the control line allows the kite to be flown and controlled. Finally, the bridle connects the control line to the kite body. It holds a hook or notch the kite needs to be fast enough to fly. The kite's structure will be different based on the purpose of the kite. Since the kite is built, understanding the forces of flight will get the kite into the air.

If a kite is heavy, it will move towards the earth by gravity. If a person flying a kite has to create enough lift to work against the force of weight, pulling the kite down. If the kite has enough lift, it will rise from a higher altitude to get the control lift. As the kite goes higher into the air, the velocity of the wind increases. The velocity of air passing over the kite's body creates more lift. Next, the kite flyer uses the control line to guide the kite to a crossing altitude. Pulling on the control line generates more lift. More lift from these pulls allows the kite to climb higher. As the wind blows against the kite, drag pulls the kite backward. However, the tension of the control line creates thrust that keeps the kite from going backward. Following these forces of flight keeps the kite moving steadily.

They were created around 1,000 years ago in China by philosophers. The kites were used for weather forecasting and military. Early kites were made of natural materials like silk or paper. Bamboo made up the framework of the kite. The kite was a diamond shape. Over time, kites became an important tool during military battles and used to measure distances before being used and for communication. A kite could be flown to drop the message. The lightning kite became a popular sport in China and is still the kite.

In 1789 scientists, kites were used for fun in Europe and the United States. People began to use them for scientific experiments. Benjamin Franklin in 1752 to measure temperature differences at different heights. Benjamin Franklin and his son used a kite (kite) with a wire to measure to study lightning. The kite had Franklin's invention of the lightning rod and was to understand flight better. The invention was a kite that would allow people to fly. Another kite was used and used in the wings of a hot air balloon. They were placed the plane in 1783, the Wright brothers completed the first successful powered flight.

Over the years, kites have become more popular. They are used for recreation and for scientific purposes. They are used to study weather, to study the forces of flight, and to study the forces of flight. They are used for recreation and for scientific purposes.
