Multiple-Choice

Introduction

This report is intended to help you better understand the 2009 AP English Language and Composition Released Exam. It includes a brief analysis of the multiple-choice questions and answers.

Introduction to the Multiple-Choice Section of the AP English Language Exam

The multiple-choice section of the AP English Language exam is a key component of the exam. It consists of 30 questions that test your ability to understand and analyze the language used in a variety of contexts. The questions are designed to assess your ability to identify the author's purpose, tone, and style, as well as your ability to evaluate the effectiveness of the language used. The questions are divided into three sections: 10 questions on the first passage, 10 questions on the second passage, and 10 questions on the third passage. The questions are designed to be challenging and to require you to think critically about the language used in each passage.
