Health policies may be used as regulatory tools in that they can on government to prescribe and control the behavior of a particular target group by monitoring the group and posing sanctions if it fails to comply. - Pluralistic Suppliers of Policy
  - Each branch and level of government can influence health policy. Both the executive and legislative branches at the federal, state and local levels can establish health policies, and the judicial branch can uphold, strike down or modify existing laws affecting health and health care at federal, state or local levels
- Decentralized role of the states
  - Under the theory of federalism, political power is shared between the federal government and the governments in each state. State governments dominant role in regulating managed care in the delivery of health care
