Abstract: This article aims to study the applicability of Steiner hermeneutic motions in Colman Barks translation of Essential Rumi. At first, it introduces hermeneutic motions suggested by George Steiner which include initiative trust, aggression, embodiment and restitution; then studies Coleman Barks' Translation of Rumi according to Steiner's hermeneutic motion. This article shows that Barks' translation is applicable in Steiner's hermeneutic motion. He could pass the first three motions but he fails in the fourth motion and did not meet the fidelity principle in his work. The author suggests that it is better to call his work as aversion but not a translation.

Keywords: Hermeneutic Motion, Steiner, Colman Barks, Rumi

Introduction

Translating poetry is the most challenging translation, especially when it is a metaphysical one. Meclawi's poems are of this type; and have deep and metaphysical meanings, this is the reason why it can be translated in different ways. Mawlana Jalal-ad-Din Mohammad Balkhi Rumi, Known in the U.S as Rumi was an Iranian great poet who a lot of translators have tried to translate his poems; among them Coleman Barks could produce a best-seller work in the U.S. American readers buy his translation enthusiastically and this poet of thirteen century is very popular in the U.S thanks to Barks' translation. This is the case that how could this translation achieve this popularity. Reading Barks' translation, one who knows Persian can understand that there are a lot of distortions and mistranslations in this work. In spite of all these distortions, Barks could produce a rather similar effect of the Meclawi's poems on American readers. This article deals with Barks translation based on Steiner hermeneutic motion to study whether it is applicable through these motions or not.

Literature Review

Steiner believed that "every understanding is actively interpretive, even the most literal statement has a hermeneutic dimension" (Steiner, p. 295). He suggested that the hermeneutic motion consists of four motions: 1) initiative trust; 2) aggression; 3) incorporation (or embodiment) and 4) compensation.

Cui Yao in "A study on translator's subjectivity in English versions of Liouhaizhirs under the perspective of George Steiner's hermeneutic motion" deals with subjectivity and analyzes different translation effects caused by translators' different culture backgrounds, personal experiences and other subjective matters.

AmerLatif (2009) in his dissertation "Qur'anic Narrative and Sufi Hermeneutics: R 'um'i's Interpretations of Pharaoh's Character" claims that Rumi has interpreted Quran and "R 'um'i's interpretive activity is motivated by a desire to guide others and he builds on the Qur'anic teachings concerning God's mercy by pointing out to his readers that the door of forgiveness is never closed"

This article deals with Steiner hermeneutic motion applicability and selects Colman Barks translation of Rumi as a case study.

Mawlana Jalal-ad-Din Mohammad Balkhi Rumi, Known in the U.S as Rumi was one of the greatest Persian poets that his translated works are best-selling recently in the U.S.

A lot of translators have translated his poems such as A.J. Arberry, William Hittick, Ravan A. G. Farbadi, Daniel
