areas from the biological to the social and cultural. Within that vast range there have been recent explosions of interest in neuropsychology, genetics and epigenetics and the evolutionary bases of mindedness. Correspondingly there have been conceptual innovations and new empirical evidence in relation to the embodied social and discursive processes supporting mind and personhood. Simultaneously awareness of developmental processes and their dynamic interweaving of genetic, physiological, neurological, social and cultural elements has also increased. Might such developments help connect the dots between diverse aspects of mindedness and the contexts within which it arises? Whilst it seems clear that mind is constituted of both biological and socio-cultural processes, how might we bring these disparate realms of knowledge together? In a number of these areas suggestive integrative possibilities have been explored, e.g. predictive processing, embodied and situated cognition, dynamic developmental systems theory and insights such as a focus on action knowledge, as skills embeddedness and connectivity have been pursued across a range of disciplines. This edited collection of articles brings together such possibilities and others in the same forum in order to provide an opportunity to re-visit a recurring discussion within theoretical psychology. The claimed lack of and potential for theoretical synthesis and unity. While the chapters range over a number of areas of research, this collection is focused on current prospects for conceptual synthesis within or convergence of research between aspects of mind and mindedness. As is clear from the contributions, it highlights integrative conceptual proposals that emphasize action orientation, process embeddedness and connectivity, especially between explanatory levels. Beyond specific proposals for integration, several of the contributions explicitly or implicitly expose broader questions about the purpose of psychological research, the epistemological and ontological commitments required and the relevant social, political and economic contexts within which such research is performed. This is perhaps inevitable since any aim for synthesis of various understandings of mind will or should lead to consideration of the general implications beyond the science that follow from an integrated account of mind and mindedness. Whether or not the contributions in this volume provide insights into profitable paths towards greater theoretical synthesis in the sciences of mind or alternatively provide grist for the mill of renewed skepticism over the potential or even desirability of such synthesis is unpredictable. Whichever the outcome, we feel sure that they will help provoke future productive research in and thinking about the sciences of mind.

The techniques of natural language processing (NLP) have been widely applied in machine translation and automated message understanding but have only recently been utilized in second language teaching. This book offers both an argument for and a critical examination of this new application with an examination of how systems may be designed to exploit the power of NLP, accommodate its limitations and minimize its risks. This volume marks the first collection of work in the U.S. and Canada that incorporates advanced human language technologies into language tutoring systems covering languages as diverse as Arabic Spanish Japanese and English The book is organized into sections that express the levels of analysis dealt with in learning and teaching a language and with the tasks of the student as writer reader conversant and actor in the world These sections bring together research by specialists in linguistics artificial intelligence psychology instructional design and language teaching In addition to providing detailed descriptions of working systems amply illustrated with screens from lesson and authoring interfaces the contributors address a spectrum of common issues What can current NLP technology contribute to computer assisted language instruction and to research on language learning How can this technology meet the demands of pedagogical theory for communicative language teaching in authentic contexts How can designers constrain tutoring environments to ensure accurate analysis of learners language What can NLP based systems teach us about language acquisition about linguistic theory and about theories of language pedagogy What lessons have been learned in using these systems to date Discipline specific issues are illuminated as well the relative merits of the major syntactic frameworks for NLP based language tutoring the adaptation of theories like lexical conceptual structure to support semantic interpretation the integration of input language with visual microworlds and dialogue games the pragmatics of the tutoring discourse the selection of instructional principles to guide system design and the accomodation of design to individual differences and learner styles A concluding section assesses this work from larger theoretical and practical perspectives experimental psychology and psycholinguistics linguistics language teaching and second language acquisition research
