Introduction

Potato is regarded as a high-potential food security crop due to its ability to provide high yield and quality product per unit input with a short crop cycle (mostly <120 days). The national average yield at present is approximately 10.5 t/ha, which is lower than the world's average yield of 17 t/ha (Muthoni et al., 2011). The potential of potato crop has not been adequately exploited. The crop is mainly grown at high altitudes of 1,500–3,000 masl by small-scale farmers, who account for over 90% of the production. Most of the production is under rainfed conditions and carried out in scattered patches of intensive small-scale agriculture (McArthur, 1989).

There are a number of production problems. The major ones are unavailability and high cost of seed tubers; lack of well-adapted cultivars to the major agro-ecological zones; suboptimal agronomic practices; the prevalence of diseases and insect pests; and inadequate storage, transportation, and marketing facilities. To address these problems, the Ethiopian Institute Agricultural Research (EIAR)—the then Institute of Agricultural Research—in collaboration with the International Potato Center (CIP), initiated potato research. The research had as its main objectives to

- develop adaptable and high-yielding potato cultivars with good resistance to biotic and abiotic stresses;
- identify the best agronomic practices and storage systems;
- adopt the use of botanical seed as an alternative propagation method;
- develop seed production system in the country; and
- train farmers and other stakeholders.

Among potato production problems, a major bottleneck that contributes to low yield in Ethiopia is the lack of healthy and quality seed tubers in the required quantity and quality (Berga and Gebremedhin, 1994). There is no formal seed system operating for clean/healthy potato seed multiplication and distribution in Ethiopia. Hirpa et al. (2010) reported that potato seed production in Ethiopia is basically informal, which in most cases operates by recycling planting materials
