

Plans for Reconstruction

After the Civil War, many Americans believed that Reconstruction should be a process of difficulty in restoring the South to its former status. A plan for Reconstruction was drafted by a group of influential men. These different proposals were called Reconstruction Plans. The first plan was the Wade-Davis Bill, which called for a Southern state to be readmitted to the Union only if it had a Southern state that was loyal to the Union. The Wade-Davis Bill was passed by the House of Representatives, but it was vetoed by President Andrew Johnson.

The Reconstruction Amendments

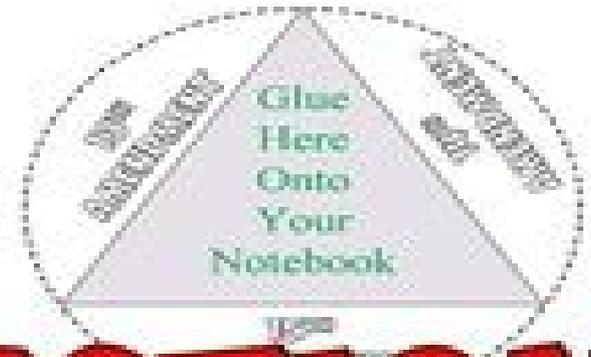

Between 1865 and 1870, three amendments to the Constitution were ratified, which would become known as the Reconstruction Amendments. Numerically, they are the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, which gave equal rights to the formerly enslaved people. The 13th Amendment abolished slavery, the 14th Amendment granted citizenship to all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and the 15th Amendment prohibited the federal government and the states from denying a citizen the right to vote based on race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

The 13th Amendment passed in Congress on January 31, 1865, a few months before President Johnson was elected. It was not formally ratified until December 6 of that year. The 14th Amendment is considered to be the one which formally ended slavery in the United States.

PROBLEMS OF THE RECONSTRUCTED SOUTH

Reconstruction was a difficult process for the South. Many people in the South were opposed to Reconstruction, and they wanted to keep the South as it was. This led to many problems, such as violence against Reconstruction workers and the passage of laws that restricted the rights of African Americans.
