Abstract

This article has the intent to scrutinize the impact which capital structure (Financing decisions) have on the financial performance of firms. Data from annual audited reports of the 28 listed firms in Chemical sector of Pakistan at KSE (Karachi Stock Exchange) retrieved for the phase of 5 years (2009-2013). Correlation and Panel least square regression analysis put in use to investigate the tie-up between capital structure and financial performance of firms. The outcome of the statistical analysis made known that TDR and STDA has significant negative influence on the financial performance of firms evaluated by ROA. The relationship in between ROA and TE is positive as well as significant. However, DER and LTDA have negative but insignificant influence on ROA.

Keywords: Capital Structure, Financial Performance (ROA), Chemical Sector, Pakistan

1. Introduction

The decisions link to the capital structure is critical for a firm due to its tie-up with financial performance. Capital structure is the strategy employed by a firm to finance its assets, growth and operations. Capital structure is the composite of total equity and total debt of firms. Firms can issue a number of securities to finance its assets however; appropriate combination of debt and equity (Optimal Capital Structure) is critical for a firm as it reduce the firm's cost of capital and maximize their market worth and stock price. Firms can even attain competitive advantage, if it has perfect capital structure. Several macro environmental and firm-specific factors influence the decisions of firm's capital structure. The country within which the particular firm operates also influences their capital structure as well as their financial performance (Krishnan & Moyer, 1997).

Whether firms capital structure affects the firm's financial performance or not, the empirical exploration on that momentous issue instigate after the Capital Structure irrelevance theory by MM. In 1958, Franco Modigliani and Merton H. Miller (M&M) made known their theory of capital structure (The Cost of Capital, Corporation Finance and the Theory of Investment). Within the set of some unrealistic and restrict presumptions, M&M disclose that firm's profitability is not rely on their capital structure. After this, enormous empirical investigations had conducted on that subject matter. Still there is no consensus in outcomes of these studies. Even capital structure theories such as Pecking order theory, Trade-off theory, Signaling theory etc. are contradicting.

Despite the number of theories and empirical studies, with regard to the capital structure, hitherto there is no mechanism to compute the perfect (Optimal) Capital Structure. The instance of debt (both short term and long term) and equity securities rely on the specific firm's finance requirement, interval for which it is required, their financial position and security market of the country within which the firm operates. Culture of the nation is also the factor that directs the use of equity and debt in the company's Capital structure (Gleason et al. 2000).

The influence of Capital structure on the financial performance of the firms have made known in a number of empirical studies in developed nations of the world. Few investigations on that subject matter had conducted in the developing states of the world. In Pakistan, this matter had examined in few sectors. Still, the findings of these empirical examinations do not reveal consensus in between them. Some studies reveal the positive association while other reveals the negative. Hitherto no study had conducted on this issue in the Chemical Sector of Pakistan. This empirical research has the intent to investigate the relationship between firm's Capital structure and financial performance in Chemical sector of Pakistan.

Research Objectives

The objectives of this empirical research are:

1. To scrutinize the influence of debt level in the firm's capital structure on the financial performance (ROA)
2. To probe the degree of debt level and profitability level in the Chemical sector of Pakistan.

Research Questions

- 1) What is the association between firm's debt and their financial performance in Chemical sector of Pakistan?
- 2) Are the correlation between Capital structure and financial performance (ROA) remarkable?
