Samsung Electronics: Analyzing Qualitative Complaint Data

We must understand variation.

—W. Edwards Deming

April 3, 2012, found Samsung Electronics quality director Kevin Sami wondering what he could do to stop the flow of bad news coming to his department. Over the past few weeks the company had experienced a series of quality-related problems; the recall of one of its LCD TV models was the most recent setback. To Sami it was clear there was no single root cause behind these problems: Samsung's supply chain management, product design, and testing/quality assurance functions all played a role.

At a meeting the previous week Sami had been shown comments about Samsung products posted on the website ConsumerAffairs.com (see Exhibit I). Although he was familiar with Samsung's customer complaint database, he was surprised at the number of—and emotion behind—the website postings. Although he had the means to influence corrective action for internal problems, Sami felt powerless to address this public perception of Samsung's products, which he worried might touch off a social media-fueled public relations firestorm that would make his job more difficult.

He wanted to analyze this qualitative feedback, but Sami's experience was limited to quantitative manufacturing data. An internal Six Sigma Black Belt consultant suggested he start by creating an affinity diagram and use that to create a Pareto diagram to determine which issues to address first.

Sami realized he would be leaving his comfort zone: engineering analyses were typically black-and-white and focused on data, but the feedback from ConsumerAffairs.com was full of emotion and conjecture with few verifiable facts. He took a stack of Post-it notes from his desk drawer and began creating his first affinity diagram.

Samsung Electronics

Samsung Electronics was a subsidiary of the Samsung Group and had been the world's largest technology company by revenues since 2009. Headquartered in South Korea, Samsung Electronics employed approximately 221,000 people and had assembly plants and sales networks in 61 countries.

Current Law Index ,2004 Foreign Investment in Latin America and the Caribbean 2006 United Nations. Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, 2007 This is the latest in a series of annual reports on recent trends and developments in relation to foreign direct investment FDI and investment strategies in Latin America and the Caribbean region The main message of this year s report is that active and integrated FDI attraction policies linked to national development strategies are necessary to secure quality FDI These lessons are drawn from policy practices in the more successful European and Asian countries which contrast with the more passive and disconnected FDI attraction policies evident in Latin America and the Caribbean The 2006 report also contains chapters that analyse the experiences of two relatively small investor countries in Latin America and the Caribbean the Republic of Korea and Portugal

Technology Transfer and International Production Jin W. Cohn, 2002 This book analyses the technology development efforts of Korea s electronics industry the country s largest exporter It asks how the Korean electronics industry was able to develop both in terms of production and technology despite low inflows of licensing and foreign direct investments The book argues that the key to its spectacular growth has been through its participation and learning from an inter firm arrangement called original equipment manufacturing arrangement OEM A number of firm level case studies on the Korean electronics industry support this argument The role of the government especially related to its technology policy has also been analysed The government was effective in providing financial incentives for the firms technological upgrading efforts but its supplying of direct technological assistance had limited success Overall this book argues that contrary to many previous studies the role of multinational enterprises has been significant in the development of Korea s electronics industry and that they have acted as a technological tutor for Korea through OEM P xiv tributors world 0 Hitotsubashi Journal of Economics ,2008 Journal of Communications and Networks ,2009
