3M™ Novec™ 1230 Fire Protection Fluid

Introduction

3M™ Novec™ 1230 Fire Protection Fluid is a next-generation halon alternative offering outstanding performance, a large margin of safety, and an excellent environmental profile.

- Zero ozone depletion potential
- Stable atmospheric lifetime
- Global warming potential (GWP) = 1
- Large margin of safety for occupied spaces

Novec 1230 Fire Protection Fluid is based on a proprietary chemical from 3M called a fluorocarbon. The full chemical name for this compound is bromotrifluoro (2-methylpropan-2-yl) heptafluoroacetate. The name is abbreviated to the Novec and 3M 1230 fire protection standards – as 3M-B-1-12.

Novec 1230 Fluid offers a unique combination of safety, low environmental impact and extinguishing performance, making it the only chemical halon replacement to offer a stable, long-term, environmentally sustainable technology for special hazards fire protection.

Physical Properties

Novec 1230 Fluid is applied as a gas, but is liquid at room temperature. It is electrically non-conducting in both the liquid and gaseous state. The breakdown voltage of Novec 1230 Fluid vapor under standard conditions at 1 atm, 21°C over a 2.7 mm electrode gap is 15.6kV, nearly 2.3 times that of air (oxygen). The breakdown voltage of liquid Novec 1230 Fluid under the same conditions is 88 kV.

The properties of Novec 1230 Fluid are similar to many of the next-generation halon alternatives with one primary exception – this compound is a liquid at ambient conditions. The boiling point of Novec 1230 Fluid is 89.2°C, meaning the product has a much lower vapor pressure than other clean agents, which are gases at ambient conditions.

Novec 1230 Fluid has a very low heat of vaporization, approximately 25 times less than that of water. This, along with a vapor pressure 12 times higher than water allows Novec 1230 Fluid to evaporate more than 30 times faster than water. This allows the agent to transition from a liquid to a gaseous state very rapidly. When discharged through a nozzle from a properly designed system, Novec 1230 Fluid will rapidly evaporate and evenly distribute throughout the protected space.
