Abstract

Sudden cardiac death (SCD) is the biggest challenge of all sports emergencies, as it is the leading cause of preventable deaths in both professional and recreational athletes. There is also an ongoing concern about COVID-19-associated cardiac pathology among athletes because myocarditis is an important cause of SCD during exercise. Hypertrophic cardiomyopathy represents 24% of SCD and Sudden Unexplained Death (normal heart at autopsy) represents 34% of SCD. To make sports participation safer, it is important to synergistically combine primary prevention of SCD by pre-participation identification of athletes affected by at-risk cardiomyopathies and secondary prevention with backup defibrillation of unpredictable sudden cardiac arrest on the field. The prompt application of an automated external defibrillator itself is associated with a greater likelihood of survival. With the advancement in the field of sports cardiology, the implantation of implantable cardioverter defibrillator has been promising in getting the athlete back on the field including in contact sports. Hence, knowledge of primary and secondary prevention is of great importance in reducing the incidence of SCD as well as improvising existing strategies.

Keywords: Athlete's heart, preparticipation cardiac screening, on-field death, cardiac arrest, ECG changes.

Introduction

All over the world sports-related medical fraternity and sports governing bodies dedicate a lot of time and resources to injury prevention and risk mitigation strategies. Among the list of injury-preventable conditions, sudden cardiac death (SCD) tops the list. Even among the cardiac pathologies, SCD or sudden unexplained death occupies the highest percentage in the United Kingdom registry, US military registry, and NCAA registry [1, 2, 3]. To make sports safer for both recreational and professional athletes and to push their bodies to the maximum limit, much progress is still yet to be made.

SCD is defined as natural death due to cardiac causes, heralded by abrupt loss of consciousness within 1 h after the onset of symptoms. The mechanisms are the following: (1) Ventricular fibrillation, (2) Ventricular tachycardia and flutter with subsequent ventricular fibrillation, (3) torsade de pointe, and (4) Bradyarrhythmias and asystolic Arrest [4].

SCD is the leading cause of death in athletes during exercise and usually results from intrinsic cardiac conditions that are triggered by the physiologic demands of vigorous exercise. Current rates of SCD appear to be at least 4 to 5 times higher than previously estimated, in the range of 1 in 50,000 athlete-years overall [5]. <35 years individuals, fall into three categories—electrical, acquired, and structural cardiac abnormality. Most of them are inherited disorders and are always quiescent and predispose the athletes to inherited SCD. Examples of these abnormalities: Structural-Hypertrophic Cardiomyopathy, Right Ventricular Cardiomyopathy, Electrical-Wolff-Parkinson-White syndrome, Brugada Syndrome, and Acquired - Myocarditis, Toxicity [1].

SCD can be a devastating condition and can present without any warning signs in seemingly normal athletes. Years of accumulated training bring about significant physiological changes in the athlete's heart. This remodeling of the heart is due to multiple factors. These changes can be demonstrated in electrocardiography and echocardiography. The incidence rate drastically differs ranging from 1:917000 athlete years (AY) to 1:3000 AY based on the methodological design. Among
