What are the difference between Connected and Unconnected Lookup?

The differences are illustrated in the below table:

Connected Lookup	Unconnected Lookup
Connected lookup participates of dataflow and receives input directly from the pipeline.	Unconnected lookup receives input values from the result of a :LKP expression in another transformation.
Connected lookup can use both dynamic and static cache.	Unconnected lookup cache be dynamic or static.
Connected lookup can return more than one column value (output port).	Unconnected lookup can return only one column value i.e. output port.
Connected lookup caches all lookup columns.	Unconnected lookup caches only the lookup output ports in the lookup conditions and the return port.
Supports user-defined DEFAULT values (i.e. value to return when lookup conditions are not satisfied).	Does not support user defined default values.

What is meant by active and passive transformation?

An active transformation is the one that performs any of the following actions:

1. Change the number of rows between transformation input and output. Example: filter transformation.
2. Change the transaction boundary by defining commit or rollback points, example transaction control transformation.
3. Change the row type, example update strategy is active because it flags the rows for insert, delete, update or reject.
