In the second century of the Christian era, the empire of Rome comprehended the third part of the earth, and the most civilized portion of mankind. The history of that extensive empire is here divided by ancient events and distinguished reigns. The reader has presented himself at land and sea; and gradually comprehended the course of the government. These personal observations suggest and attend the advantages of war.

In former years, the public administration was conducted by the virtue and abilities of Scipio, Jugur, Marcellus, and the two Antonines. It is the design of this and of the two succeeding chapters, to describe the progressive condition of their empire; and afterwards, from the death of Marcus Antoninus, to declare the most important circumstances of its decline and fall; a revolution which will ever be remembered, and is still felt by the nations of the earth. The principal conquests of the Romans were achieved under the republic; and the emperors, for the most part, were satisfied with preserving those dominions which had been acquired by the policy of the senate, the active conduct of the consuls, and the martial valour of the people. The seven first centuries were filled with a rapid succession of triumphs; but it was
