

PhET Projectile Motion Lab

Google "PhET Projectile", it will be the first hit (if you NEED a URL, it's <http://phet.colorado.edu/en/simulation/projectile-motion>) Then click the Run Now button beneath the picture. Take a few minutes to familiarize yourself with the simulation and shoot stuff with the cannon. Once you've somewhat satisfied your primal desires to shoot things, follow along with the questions below. Use complete sentences, yo.

1. Look at the "height" box at the top. What kinematics term does it actually stand for, and what point is it relative to? (hint: shoot the cannon once and watch the number closely). Explain your reasoning.

2. Fire the projectile launcher straight upwards (angle = 90°) at 18 m/s. Using kinematics, determine:
 - a) the time it should take the projectile to reach maximum height

 - b) the maximum height reached by the projectile

 - c) Now, using the measuring tape, measure the actual height reached by the projectile (remember to measure from the little plus sign at the base of the cannon). Was your answer to (b) the same as this measurement? If it wasn't, check your math over and find your mistake.

Conference Proceedings CIVINEDU 2025 REDINE, 2025-06-10 Government Reports Announcements & Index, 1992-07 Three-Dimensional Simulations of Normal Impact of Projectiles on Moving Targets, 1993 Three dimensional simulations of normal impact of 38 16 mm long steel cylinders of L D 6 on thin 1 59 mm aluminum plates which are themselves in motion have been conducted using the HULL code on Cray supercomputers HULL is an Eulerian code that uses a finite difference scheme to solve partial differential equations of continuum mechanics An elastic perfectly plastic model was used to describe the strain response of the target and the projectile Simulations for projectile velocities of 219 m/s and 876 m/s with die plates moving laterally edge on at 40 m/s and 160 m/s respectively are compared with cases when the plates are stationary The transverse plate motion perpendicular to the projectile results in a time dependent alteration of projectile motion and produces a tearing of the plate in addition to the plugging that would occur if the plate were stationary The results of the simulations are presented as graphic time histories of the physical quantities including sum waves in rod plate interaction These results show that if an armor plate is set in relative transverse motion with respect to an incidental projectile it acquires a greater protection capability than the corresponding stationary plate This has implications for armor applications for live fire testing and for vulnerability and lethality analyses
