

Provisions for assessment of existing structures in the second-generation concrete Eurocode

Craig Cicco examines ways in which the second-generation of Eurocode 2 will facilitate the assessment of existing concrete-framed structures.

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) (referred to as EN 1992-1) includes additional provisions that enable it to be used for assessment of existing structures. This article outlines some of these provisions, which are likely to be of assistance when using Eurocode 2 to assess concrete-framed structures. These include:

- determining characteristic material properties for assessment
- adjusting design loads or factors where testing is used to determine material properties
- determining values of deterioration
- load lifting force and anchorage lengths of bar ends
- dealing with existing structures' capacity to be assessed
- design rules/provisions for assessment of their resistance.

Material properties

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) requires characteristic values of material properties to assess the member resistance. Annex E provides guidance for how values to obtain relevant values for assessment. It introduces use of EN 1992-1-1 (2004) to determine the self-characteristic concrete strength from testing. It provides a range of factors to adjust to determine  $f_{ck}$  from  $f_{ctd}$  (taking some provision for 'deterioration' where testing is not to be carried at the region being assessed. Additional information is provided to the standard to enable characteristic values of self strength or reinforcement to be determined from testing should steel grades used in the structure not be available from relevant information.

The UK National Annex committee is presently reviewing this factor for determining  $f_{ck}$  from  $f_{ctd}$ . It may require some adjustments to the characteristic values to assess agreement with values obtained from EN 1992-1-1 (2004) and the UK National Annex, taking into account the ability to adjust design factors for material in Annex A of the new standard. It may also consider different methods of determining  $f_{ck}$  from  $f_{ctd}$  where some concrete has been used in the region being assessed, such as using the results of laboratory tests made on aged concrete cylinders, along with relevant provisions in EN 1992-1-1 (2004).

Partial material factors

Annex E of the new standard provides new guidance for using partial material factors to be adjusted based on material test results from the structure. This should generally reduce the value of these factors, where a low coefficient of variation of material strength is obtained from testing, which is beneficial for assessed members resistance. The standard permits test data available from records to also be used where suitable and appropriate.

Deterioration

Provision is made for deterioration of concrete, which is generally an issue. The rest of the standard has to take all issues associated with deterioration, but in assessing members for global types of deterioration and their impact. It also clearly provides guidance on when assessment in accordance is likely to affect the provision of the test.

Other items

There have been a number of EN 1992-1-1 (2004) changes. The standard introduces the inclusion of concrete strength determined by concrete cylinders. The provisions are based on a new extended-member test of steel, test that was developed during the drafting of the standard (Pohlmann et al.). The provisions also cover the variation of load resulting from variable dead loads.

Provision is made for members that are subject to non-uniform stress or strain using these provisions in certain circumstances. Other established methods of assessing the bond of steel bars are available in the UK, including those listed by National Highway (2004). These may more closely with British provisions in EN
