SharePoint Oleg Rumiancev, 2017 SharePoint SPFx Development Model is designed to help both new and existing developers better acquaint themselves with the new set of tools required to do the job as well as providing clear instructions how some of the server side full trust development model practices can be achieved with this new framework

Moving into the cloud and away from server side takes away certain customization capabilities but enhances the client side look and feel

Relying on the SPFx framework this new model can be used to create modern lightweight web applications in SharePoint Online

In the third volume we will cover the newly emerging community driven SharePoint

Framework short for SPFx It is viewed as an expansion of existing Add in model focusing on delivering custom client side web parts and page layouts with more functionality in the roadmap We will cover another emerging community driven client side development model that uses open source tools and does not require add in packaging We will cover the basic open source toolchain and development workflow using this model Later we ll develop a client side web part as well as cover debugging deployment and versioning of our solutions In the end we will list a number of active community resources which are being constantly worked by a joint team of Microsoft internal representatives as well as SharePoint community s most active MVPs Resource description page
