Learning Targets: I can determine each poem's meaning.

Letter Burns for the Perfection of Paper —Martin Espada

As children, I watched other high school seniors at a printing plant that manufactured legal pads:
the paper
stacked several feet high and leaning on a rickety scaffold between the pages, then brushed and given up and down the stack, knights' fingers! fingers! required for the perfection of paper, something the water arrange through by its ad... the hands would slide along, suddenly sharp paper, but gather like stones that the artists of the day, hidden
Then the great scroll of things Finally seeing the both palms turned at the perfection.

Two years later, in law school, I know that every legal pad was glued with the string of hidden cuts, that every open notebook was a part of hands upturned and turning.
