

Practice Problems Chemical Kinetics: Rates and Mechanisms of Chemical Reactions

1. State two quantities that must be measured to establish the rate of a chemical reaction and cite several factors that affect the rate of a chemical reaction.

Answer

The rate of a reaction is defined as the change in concentration as a function of time. Thus, the two quantities that must be measured are the molarity of either a reactant or product and the time.

The factors that affect a reaction rate include the temperature, the concentration of reactants, the surface area (if solids are involved in the reaction), and the presence or absence of a catalyst.

2. Explain why the rate of disappearance of NO and the rate of formation of N₂ are not the same in the reaction, 2CO(g) + 2NO(g) → 2CO₂(g) + N₂(g).

Answer

Because of the 2:1 stoichiometric ratio between NO and N₂, the NO must use 2 moles for each mole of N₂ produced. This means the rate of consumption of NO is twice as fast as the rate of production of N₂.

3. What plot of experimental data can be used to evaluate the activation energy, E_a, of a reaction? How is E_a related to this plot?

Answer

The experimental data required to evaluate the activation energy are rate constants as a function of absolute temperature. If ln k is plotted against 1/T, a straight line should result and the slope of the line is equal to -E_a/R, where R is the ideal gas constant in energy units.

4. What are the chief requirements that must be met by a plausible reaction mechanism? Why do we say "plausible" mechanism rather than "correct" mechanism?

Answer

A reaction mechanism must meet two criteria. 1) The sum of all of the steps in the mechanism must match the observed reaction, i.e., the stoichiometry of the reaction must be satisfied. 2) The reaction mechanism must account for the experimentally observed rate law.

Reaction mechanisms are considered "plausible" rather than "correct" because different sequences of elementary reactions may meet the two requirements.

5. In a reaction mechanism, (a) what is the difference between an activated complex and an intermediate? (b) What is meant by the rate-determining step? Which elementary reaction in a reaction mechanism is often the rate-determining step?

Answer

(a) An activated complex is the structure along the reaction pathway of the highest energy, which determines the activation energy of the reaction. An intermediate can be any structure found in the reaction path.

(b) The rate-determining step is the elementary reaction that controls the mathematical form of the overall rate law. The rate-determining step is usually the slowest elementary reaction.

6. In the reaction H₂O₂(aq) → H₂O(l) + ½ O₂(g), the initial concentration of H₂O₂ is 0.2546 M, and the initial rate of reaction is 9.32 × 10⁻⁴ M s⁻¹. What will be [H₂O₂] at t = 35 s?

Answer

Use the definition of rate (change in concentration over change in time), recognizing that the initial rate for the loss of hydrogen peroxide is negative and at t = 0 s, [H₂O₂] = 0.2546 M.
