Introduction to anglophone (English-language) literature Analytical, theoretical approach
Considering key figures, key genres, key text types

Different critical and analytical approaches to reading literature

There is a difference between reading for plot, story and so on and reading analytically!

Analyzing the plot will be part of the course → marriage plot

What are the conditions that makes this kind of story, that emerges at a specific time in history?

We will trace features of poetry, prose, drama and film.

Major genres: fiction, poetry, drama

Pay attention to the formal distinctions. What is different in the form of the texts?

How do they produce effect in the reader or spectator?

History of the different forms → where do they come from, how do they create their effects on the reader, how do they show different form of qualities?

Aim of the course:

To become acquainted with the academic study of English literature.

To learn the ability to analyze different forms of texts using the toolkits of literary criticism.

• text analysis, narratology, figures of speech, historicization, interpretation and literary theory

o i. e. analyzing poetry

- make students familiar with the purpose, terminology and praxis of literary criticism
- give a survey of the major literary genres and the special problems relating to them reading a text with different approaches: gender studies, psychological, environmental, etc.

What is literature?

How do we define it? What counts as literature?

Very difficult, fluid category, there are more obstacles to the definition of literature than there are smooth paths to it.

It's not objectively fixed. It is subjectively perceived considering the time of the perception, the social group the reader belongs to and many other factors.

The category that is defined as "literature" is distinguishable, in some meaningful way, from other forms of human cultural expression or representation.

It is however very difficult to pin down the object of study.

There are 8 different angles of viewing this problem:

- Definitions & Etymologies
- Materiality
- National Literatures
- Genre
- Fact vs. Fiction
- The Text
- The Reader
- Historical Context
