

CHAPTER 25

The Industrial Revolution, 1700–1900

Connect History and Geography

During the 1800s, machines rapidly replaced hand labor as the principal means of producing goods. This era of factory growth is known as the Industrial Revolution. The map at the right shows industrialized areas in Europe as of 1870. Use the map to answer the questions below.

1. What is the most industrialized country?
2. What other European countries were industrializing in the 1800s?
3. What were the key British industrial centers at the time?
4. What geographic factors might have encouraged the development of industry in certain places?

For more information about the Industrial Revolution

Railroads began to crosscut the eastern United States in the 1830s. At that time, iron tracks started to connect some American cities. Railroads enabled new materials and finished goods to move back and forth between mines, factories, cities, and ports.

As industrialization spread across the countries of Western Europe in the 18th century, workers began to organize. Many workers in Germany used strikes in order to protect their earnings.
