

BASIC GASKET APPLICATION GUIDE & MATERIAL SELECTION

Application / Function

Pressure gaskets are generally used to seal and support the integrity of the interface of flanges by either compressed. These concepts show 2 gaskets under different load types in a pressure vessel application as all flanges are made of materials used to increase the quality. A gasket is used to maintain the pressure in a system and to prevent leakage throughout the life cycle application. The gasket compresses to form a seal between the mating surfaces of the vessel. This is done by creating a uniform force on the gasket to ensure the seal is maintained over the application between the mating surfaces. If the gasket creates uniform force for uniform and consistent through the life of the application then it would be considered the right gasket.

In order to determine if the application pressure will create the gasket design to optimize the gasket for service in either use. Every gasket application or design has many parameters that must be addressed to optimize the performance of what the gasket is required to do in the application.
