

Radioactive Decay: A Sweet Simulation of Half-Life

INTRODUCTION

As the candies "decay" over time, you'll observe how the number of candies remaining decreases over time, illustrating the concept of half-life.

Procedure:

1. Start with 100 candies. Record the number of candies remaining after the first "decay" (removing 50 candies). Repeat this process for 10 "decays" (removing 50 candies each time) and record the number of candies remaining after each "decay".

2. Plot your results on a graph with time on the x-axis and the number of candies remaining on the y-axis. The resulting curve should show exponential decay, illustrating the concept of half-life.

3. Calculate the half-life of the candies by dividing the total number of candies by 2 and recording the time it takes for the number of candies to reach that value.

4. Compare your results to the theoretical half-life of the candies (50 candies) and discuss any discrepancies.
