Replacement Shaker Screens and
Compliance to API RP 13C

As an independent replacement screen manufacturer, Global Wire Cloth has taken extensive steps to follow the guidelines established by the American Petroleum Institute for proper labeling with "Replacement Shaker Screens".

API RP 13C and being Compliant in this testing procedure means that manufacturers test certain meshes using the spelled criteria within the test. The manufacturers then label both their screens and packaging with the results of the test and are then API Compliant. The procedure tests mesh performance down to a specific micron. The American Petroleum Institute description is the following: "This procedure gives a method to determine the drilled solids removal efficiency by a set of drilling fluid processing equipment. The drilled solids removal efficiency refers to the fraction of drilled rock discarded compared with the volume of drilled solids generated. Shale shaker screen designations and labeling are included as a method for manufacturers to mark screens in a consistent manner. The screen identification tag describes the separation potential, the conductance, and the non-blanked area of the screen. Screen manufacturers shall use this designation to comply with this standard."

Global Wire Cloth's membership to API and adherence to the standards set forth in API RP 13C make us a reliable source for replacement shaker screens and we look forward to working with you.
