ABSTRACT

Background: Postnatal period is a vulnerable time, because most maternal and new born deaths occur during this period, especially immediately after childbirth. Postnatal care in the first hours and days after childbirth could prevent the great majority of these deaths. The objective of study was to assess the utilization of post-natal care and associated factors for low utilization in urban area of Jabalpur district.

Methods: A community based cross-sectional study was carried 360 mothers who delivered in last one year in urban area of Jabalpur district. Sampling method was multistage sampling method. A total 36 wards with 10 mothers from each ward was selected. The questionnaire included information related to mode of delivery, post-natal checkups and visits of health care providers.

Results: Among 360 mothers, 93.9% mothers received first postnatal check-up within 24 hrs, 1.11% of mothers between 2-3 days and 1.67% of mothers received first postnatal check-up between 4-7 days while 3.33% of mothers didn't receive any postnatal check-up. Regarding number of post-natal visits, 58.33% mothers received 3 or more postnatal visits, 35% of mother received 2 PNC visits, while 3.3% did not receive a single postnatal visit. The education of mothers, joint type of family, high socioeconomic status, early registration of pregnancy, minimum 4 ANC visits and institutional deliveries were found significantly associated with utilization of postnatal check-up.

Conclusions: Utilization of postnatal services is still poor in the urban areas even though the physical accessibility was adequate. In the present study, it was concluded that the role of education, especially of female education, is important contributing factor associated with utilization of postnatal care.

INTRODUCTION

Globally, over 500,000 women die around child birth every year, with over 90% of the deaths occurring in the developing countries, most of the deaths occur during or immediately after childbirth.^{1,2} Postnatal period is a six-week interval between birth of a new born and the return of the reproductive organs to their normal non-pregnant state.³ The timing of postnatal care is also crucial to the well-being of the mother and baby. The studies have shown that some 50% of maternal deaths and 40% of neonatal deaths occur within 24 hours after birth, also known as the "immediate postnatal period".^{1,4}

WHO recommends that women, who have delivered in a health facility, should receive PNC for at least 24 hours after birth. If a birth is at home, the first postnatal contact should be as early as possible within 24 hours of birth. Three additional PNC contacts are recommended on day 3, between days 7-14 after birth and 6 weeks after birth.⁴ There are few data on early postnatal care specifically. Still, many women who give birth in facilities, are

Addressing the inequalities in maternal and child healthcare utilization, 2023-12-19 Neonatal health in low- and middle-income countries Britt Nakstad, Ashish K. C., Andrew Steenhoff, Susan Coffin, 2023-05-05 Early Maternal and Child Health Management and the Impact of Living Environment Hong Lu, Lihua Ren, Kathleen Marion Baird, Jiasi Yao, 2025-08-08 Maternal and newborn health stands as a pivotal force in societal progress aligning with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) that aim to diminish maternal mortality, reduce morbidity, and eliminate preventable deaths among women and infants. Over the past few decades, this field has burgeoned into a critical area of study, garnering attention from various disciplines such as obstetrics, gynecology, midwifery, nursing, psychology, and psychiatry. Evidence-based practices have catalyzed improvements in various health domains, ranging from managing complex pregnancies to fostering natural labor progression, promoting breastfeeding, and nurturing early parenthood. In light of contemporary global challenges, environmental alterations emerge as predominant health concerns, significantly amplifying the vulnerability of women and infants. Issues like climate change, indoor and outdoor air pollution, and emerging environmental pollutants have spurred substantial attention towards the interaction between the environment and maternal/child health. Adverse environmental exposures may directly affect the health of mothers and children, perpetuating intergenerational consequences. A nuanced understanding of these effects and mechanisms is essential to safeguard maternal and child health. Social Determinants of Women's Health in Low and Middle Income Countries Rubeena Zakar, Parveen Ali, Gaurang Baxi, Sarosh Iqbal, 2024-11-11 It is well established that the social determinants of health (SDH) highly influence health outcomes and inequities. This is particularly true in low and middle income countries where women are deprived of their basic rights including access to health services, appropriate nutrition, and education. Socio-cultural practices such as child marriages, forced marriages, cousin marriages, female genital mutilation, and son preference undermine women's health and well-being. Additionally, various negative stereotypes such as pregnancy and childbirth related taboos, dowry and honor related violence, restrictions on women's mobility, and social participation are significantly associated with women's health status. To improve women's sexual and reproductive health, societies must take comprehensive and integrated measures to address these cultural stereotypes and harmful sociocultural practices against women. A SDH approach dictates that health is shaped importantly by various individual factors and community norms that further enable or constrain health. Individual factors include education, income, ethnicity, and the environment wherein people live, including their families, communities, and workplace. Macro-level social factors include the labor market, schools, healthcare systems, legal systems, institutionalized practices, and ideologies. In many low and middle income countries, women are still socially excluded and economically marginalized. They lack opportunities for education, economic growth, and political participation. There are many social drivers associated with maternal health. Many negative life experiences such as infertility and perinatal loss, poverty, discrimination, social inequalities lack of autonomy violence economic dependency and isolation have long lasting impact on mothers mental health and wellbeing To comprehensively understand the drive of maternal health a multilevel and bio social approach of social determinants of women s health is integral

The Epidemiology of Missed and Delayed Medical Diagnosis: Implications for Health Equity and Public Health Kenneth A. Mundt,Doug Salvador,Ronald Wyatt,2025-06-12 Preventing diagnostic errors including missed and delayed diagnosis improves patient safety and saves lives While epidemiological research on patient safety has increased since the US National Academies Institute of Medicine now NASEM published 2000 To Err Is Human Building a Safer Health System progress toward understanding the nexus of conditions and factors that cause or contribute to diagnostic error has been measured Impeding progress are perceptions that diagnostic errors primarily arise from inadequate medical training overworked and stressed providers and innocent mistakes and subsequently that interventions should focus on training and clinical management However additional aspects that potentially affect diagnostic accuracy have been identified effective communication and patient engagement especially in multilingual and multicultural groups where perceptions and beliefs may not be shared or understood medical conditions with ambiguous signs and or vague symptoms settings with limited access to advanced technologies social cultural and economic structures and organization and management of care delivery Recent epidemiological studies indicate that diagnostic errors vary considerably across sociodemographic cultural and socioeconomic groups suggesting that underlying determinants range well beyond the clinical encounters and settings

Gender Inequalities, Sexual and Reproductive Health, and Sustainable Development in the Global South Praveen Kumar Pathak,Shah Md Atiqul Haq,Niharika Tripathi,Tizta Degfie,2025-08-22 Investing in Sexual and Reproductive Health SRH has been recognized as one of the prudent strategies to ensure the well being of girls and women and also to advance broader social and economic development for the nations and future generations Moreover it provides an excellent opportunity for millions of girls and women to make an informed choice about the number timing and spacing between births experience safe motherhood deliver healthy newborns and have a safe and satisfying sexual life However several young girls and women encounter an array of structural barriers patriarchy and unfavorable gendered norms practices including child marriage son preference gender based violence against women female foeticide lower access to economic property rights restriction of mobility etc that hinder their socioeconomic progress and health status Discourse on leveraging gender equity and reproductive health could be further strengthened with the involvement of young boys and men Given that restrictive gender norms affect both men s and women s reproductive health potential therefore integrating young boys and men along with young girls and women shall be a comprehensive strategy to ensure equitable quality and sustainable reproductive health among people
