Athlete Burnout Among High School Drill Team Members Tayler Jackson, 2025 High school drill team is an intensive year round sport that exposes athletes to heightened risk of burnout yet little research has examined this issue within the drill community This study investigated burnout among 59 recently graduated drill team athletes in the Rocky Mountain region using the Athlete Burnout Questionnaire ABQ The ABQ measured emotional physical exhaustion reduced sense of accomplishment and sport devaluation with results analyzed through descriptive statistics one way ANOVA and thematic coding of open ended responses Findings showed that emotional and physical exhaustion was the most prevalent form of burnout with 83.1% of athletes reporting moderate to high levels Reduced accomplishment 32.2% and sport devaluation 28.8% were less frequent suggesting many athletes are in the early stages of burnout Qualitative data highlighted coaching issues and overwhelming time demands as the leading contributors These results suggest that burnout is shaped less by school size or competition level and more by workload management recovery opportunities and coach athlete dynamics Recommendations include structured rest balanced training and autonomy supportive coaching to safeguard athlete well being

Burnout Symptoms Among Collegiate Certified Athletic Trainers Kate Drendel, 2015 Athletic trainers ATs are allied health care professionals with the primary responsibilities of preventing recognizing managing and rehabilitating athletic injuries amongst a physically active population Athletic trainer 2015 Due to the environmental demands of this occupation several studies have been conducted to investigate how various factors may influence the careers health and potential burnout of these practitioners e.g. Kania Meyer Kahanov Eberman Deci Raedeke Pelletier et al 1995 and the Work Need Satisfaction Survey WNSS Deci Connell however 61.1% of the variance in the T1 total burnout scores could be explained by number of days off per week amotivation identified regulation and perceived autonomy Finally while these ATs did not score particularly high on burnout their supervisors should be still be aware of the symptoms and treatment methods for this condition In addition managers should also encourage ATs to take time away from work to tend to their needs Lastly through BPN satisfaction more self determined forms of motivation should develop as a result

Research Quarterly for Exercise and Sport, 2009

Literature Reviews in Sport Psychology Sheldon Hanton, 2006 Sport Psychology research has developed and expanded considerably over the last decade or two Its accelerating volume of research output embraces a wide variety of topics having both academic and practical impact and relating to other areas of Sports Science and also the broader overall discipline of mainstream psychology In this busy and developing arena the healthy and productive evolution of a research topic requires the periodic summarisation reflection and feedback that is the domain of the literature review A review acts as the primary catalyst for a topic s emerging organisation reorganisation and structure and generates perspectives and pointers for further study directions it establishes reference points and foundations for continued progress By its very nature it tends to be a larger publication than a typical focused research paper The pathways to publication of Sport Psychology research are often severely congested For example in 2004 four of the main refereed outlets for original research in Sport Psychology The Sport Psychologist the Journal of Applied Sport Psychology the Journal of Sport and Exercise Psychology and the Psychology of Sport and Exercise received over 400 submissions private communications Inevitably the space that established journals can afford to grant to review articles is limited both in terms of the article size and the frequency with which topics can be visited

Although reviews that appear in books usually enjoy a larger and more appropriate space allocation they typically have not carried the hallmark of external independent peer review that journal publication provides This collection presents a number of contemporary reviews of significant and popular topics from some prominent researchers within each area An important and distinctive feature of this volume is that all the chapters have been subjected to peer review by expert referees a process usually reserved solely for journal publications This book offers up to date literature reviews with a distinctive conceptual theoretical and practical focus Examining Relationships in Sport Contexts Nicole Marie LaVoi,2002 Sport

Specialization Status and Athlete Burnout, Engagement, and Motivation William Holt Johnson,2017 Early sport specialization in which athletes compete in one sport nearly year round at a young age is common in today s athletic culture Several national sport organizations advise against early specialization due to its potentially increasing the risk of burnout and maladaptive motivation outcomes C t et al 2009 CSFL 2016 NASPE 2010 However the few empirical studies that have examined the association of specialization with burnout engagement or motivation have found mixed results Gould et al 1996 Russell Strachan et al 2009 This might be in part due to researchers not differentiating between early and late specialization Theoretically early specialization creates greater risk of maladaptive outcomes compared to late specialization based on the Developmental Model of Sport Participation Cote Vierimaa 2014 Purpose This study examined if differences existed between early late and non specializers on burnout engagement and motivation Methods Two samples of athletes participated in this study The first sample was comprised of 276 female club soccer players with an average age of 14 94 SD 1 39 There were 112 early 22 late and 113 non specializers The second sample consisted of 106 wrestlers and swimmers 70 male and 36 female with an average age of 15 67 1 38 years Of the sample 30 were early 25 were late and 51 were non specializers Athletes completed a sport specific demographic survey that included questions assessing their sport involvement and specialization status In addition athletes completed the Athlete Burnout Questionnaire Raedeke Smith 2001 the Athlete Engagement Questionnaire Lonsdale et al 2007b and the Behavioral Regulation in Sport Questionnaire Lonsdale et al 2008 A series of one way ANOVAs were used to examine differences between early i e 13 or younger late and non specializers on burnout engagement and motivation Cohen s d was used to measure effect size Results For the soccer athletes ANOVAs found no significant differences between specialization groups and burnout p The Sport Psychologist ,2009
