Description

A collection of essays spanning politics, criticism, and feminism from one of the most-watched young cultural observers of her generation, Roxane Gay. "Pink is my favorite color. I used to say my favorite color was black to be cool, but it is pink - all shades of pink. If I have an accessory, it is probably pink. I read Vogue, and I'm not doing it ironically, though it might seem that way. I once live-tweeted the September issue." In these funny and insightful essays, Roxane Gay takes us through the journey of her evolution as a woman (Sweet Valley High) of color (The Help) while also taking listeners on a ride through culture of the last few years (Girls, Django in Chains) and commenting on the state of feminism today (abortion, Chris Brown). The portrait that emerges is not only one of an incredibly insightful woman continually growing to understand herself and our society, but also one of our culture. >Bad Feminist is a sharp, funny, and spot-on look at the ways in which the culture we consume becomes who we are, and an inspiring call-to-arms of all the ways we still need to do better.

Contributions include essays from established and up-and-coming writers, performers, and critics including actors Ally Sheedy and Gabrielle Union and writers Amy Jo Burns, Lyz Lenz, Claire Schwartz, and Bob Shacochis. Covering a wide range of topics and experiences from an exploration of the rape epidemic embedded in the refugee crisis to first-person accounts of child molestation, this collection is often deeply personal and is always unflinchingly honest. From the country's beginning, essayists in the United States have used their prose to articulate the many ways their individuality has been shaped by the politics, social life, and culture of this place. The Cambridge History of the American Essay offers the fullest account to date of this diverse and complex history. From Puritan writings to essays by Indigenous authors, from Transcendentalist and Pragmatist texts to Harlem Renaissance essays, from New Criticism to New Journalism, the story of the American essay is told here, beginning in the early eighteenth century and ending with the vibrant, heterogeneous scene of contemporary essayistic writing. The essay in the US has taken many forms: nature writing, travel writing, the genteel tradition, literary criticism, hybrid genres such as the essay film and the photo essay. Across genres and identities, this volume offers a stirring account of American essayism into the twenty-first century. Am I a Bad Feminist? Moments of Reflection and Negotiation in Contemporary Feminist Identity Elizabeth Ryan Brownlow, 2020

In 2014, Roxane Gay published Bad Feminist, a collection of personal essays written from her position as a Haitian American feminist academic. This work quickly skyrocketed in popularity across both academic and nonacademic audiences. Representative of the increasingly public facing autoethnographic scholarship of feminist academic women Gay's work is a product of its time For this dissertation I examine Bad Feminist along with two other also wildly popular autoethnographic works produced in the same decade Tressie McMillan Cotton's Thick And Other Essays and Maggie Nelson's The Argonauts I examine these texts as public facing accessible works that communicate their academic feminist authors feelings of feminist inadequacy in order to address larger issues of feminist practice and theory Utilizing Sara Ahmed's theory of becoming feminist I analyze the bad feminist moments expressed in these texts as moments of feminist crisis to identify what causes them and what functions they might serve Using qualitative methodological triangulation better known as mixed methods research I employ topic modeling and content analysis across all three texts to identify patterns that reveal not only why and how academic feminists might feel like they are bad feminists but how and why they choose to share the moments in which they feel like bad feminists with others Fighting to maintain their feminist identities in a world rife with gendered and raced violence neoliberal ideals of self sufficiency and individual perfection rapidly evolving technologies and intersecting historical structures of oppression these authors utilize moments of feminist imperfection to create space and time to disarticulate and rearticulate their relationships to feminism their relationships to other people and their relationships to academia In this project I conclude that bad feminist moments might be reactions to the pressures of both historical and contemporary structures of oppression but the choice to reflect on them and share with others is based in feminist principles of reflexivity and collective inspiration to resist perpetuating ongoing structures of oppression inside and outside of the academy
