

Materials

- Periodic Table (this should be partially complete)

Metals, Nonmetals and Metalloids

The three major groups on the Periodic Table are the metals, nonmetals and metalloids. Elements within each group have similar physical and chemical properties. Some of the physical properties used to distinguish between the three groups are:

- Luster = the ability of a substance to reflect light. Usually the descriptive words are either metallic or non-metallic.
- Conductivity = the ability of the substance to conduct electricity. This may be tested with a conductivity meter
- Malleability = the ability of the substance to be hammered into sheets without breaking.
- Ductility = the ability of the substance to be pulled into a thin wire.

Metals are -

- found to the left of the zigzag line on the periodic table.
- solid at room temperature, except for mercury, which is a liquid.
- good conductors of electricity and heat. But some are better conductors than others!
- metallic looking with a shiny luster.
- ductile and can be drawn into wire, but some metals are more ductile than others.
- malleable and can be hammered into sheets without breaking.

Nonmetals are -

- found to the right of the zigzag line on the periodic table.
- solid, liquid, or gas at room temperature.
- poor conductors of electricity and heat.
- not metallic looking. They have a dull luster and do not reflect much light.
- brittle when they are solid.

Metalloids -

- are found along the zigzag line on the periodic table. The only exception is Aluminum. It is considered to be a metal even though it lies along the zigzag.
- have no set characteristics. They share properties of both metals and nonmetals. For example, they may have a shiny luster but be poor conductors and brittle.
- include boron, silicon, germanium, arsenic, antimony, tellurium and polonium
