As shown, if you use straight or nearly straight saw logs, placing the same thicknesses. Then place the beams of one leg on the top surface of the leg and a rail over.

Mighty Posts

Some early trestle tables had decorative posts that joined the four saw legs. Most show these posts had a gable form with lower sides, but I think occasional ones are that look more "Mighty" — as seen on the table unfortunately with roots in the 19th century.

Except for the decorative posts, these trestles are actually simpler to build. The legs are tapered squares — not rectangles, and the decorative posts are added to the legs.

Tapers on Tapers on Legs

The tapered top of four legs on legs are 7" x 7" square at the base and 11" x 11" square at the top. This is easily done with a hand plane, guided by a square plane. Mark out the finished dimensions on the top of the legs and jack plane the tapers. Check up these feet carefully with a square plane.
