

Alloy 5083 is a non-heat-treatable 4½% magnesium, 0.15% chromium, 0.7% manganese alloy commonly available in flat rolled plate from a range of producing mills. Like all the 5000-series high magnesium alloys 5083 achieves a high strength by cold working, enabling a series of "H" tempers; 5083 is the highest strength of any of these alloys.

Alloy 5083 is best known as a plate for ship building.

The alloy is also produced as extruded seamless tube and other extrusions and as forgings; these are available on indent from Atlas.

Corrosion Resistance

Excellent in a wide range of atmospheric environments, in food processing and architectural applications. The principal application for 5083 is marine environments. The magnesium content is more than 3½% Mg, so this alloy can be susceptible to stress corrosion cracking, which limits its application temperature to below 65°C and also limits the amount of cold work to ¼ Hard.

Special intergranular corrosion and exfoliation corrosion tests are carried out to certify 5083 for marine applications – refer to the later section on B928 and classification society rules.

Heat Treatment

Alloy 5083 is not hardenable by heat treatment. It can be significantly hardened by cold work (eg by cold rolling) and various "H" tempers are produced – most commonly H32 (¼ Hard) or the similar strength marine tempers H116 and H321 – as well as the soft annealed Temper O condition.

The alloy spontaneously age-softens at room temperature immediately after cold work but will eventually reach a stable condition; all flat rolled mill products are supplied with stable properties. This is usually achieved by a stabilisation thermal treatment as the last operation which results in the H32 or H321 tempers. H112 temper is strain hardened as the final operation, again to quickly reach the required stable temper properties.

To soften Alloy 5083 it can be annealed by heating to 345°C, hold until uniform temperature then cool; the rate of cooling is not important.

Welding

Excellent weldability by all standard electric and resistance methods; gas welding is not recommended. GMAW and GTAW are preferred and widely used to produce structural welds. When welding 5083 to itself or another alloy in the 5xxx series, the recommended filler metal is 5183. Other fillers are possible. Welding of strain hardened tempers will reduce strengths in the heat affected zones.

Machining

Machinability of 5083 is poor due to its high strength.

ASTM B928M and Classification Society Rules

ASTM B209M covers a large range of aluminium alloys intended for general applications – architectural, structural and light-duty marine for example. Following serious corrosion problems leading up to 2000 the new standard ASTM B928M was introduced to prevent corrosion of ship structures. Alloy 5083 and only a few other high magnesium alloys are included in B928M. The only tempers permitted – H116 and H321 for 5083 – require testing for exfoliation corrosion and intergranular corrosion resistance, to ASTM G66 and G67. In addition Classification Society (Lloyds, DNV etc) rules are frequently called for in purchase of plate for ship building. Inspection certificates for 5083 H116 or H321 would normally show endorsement by DNV or another Classification Society.

Typical Applications

Plate for ship building, unfired welded pressure vessels, rail and other vehicles, various structural applications that make use of the high strength.
