Three Theories of the Solar System

Three Theories of the Solar System

Three theories (geocentric, heliocentric, and tidal) try to describe how the solar system formed.

In the geocentric theory, the Earth is at the center of the solar system. The sun, planets, and moons orbit around it. This theory was proposed by Ptolemy in the 2nd century AD. It was the dominant theory for centuries.

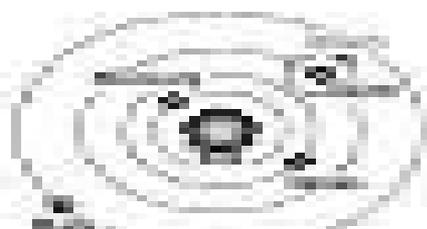

During the 16th century, Copernicus proposed a heliocentric theory. He stated that the sun is at the center of the solar system, and the planets orbit around it. This theory was initially rejected but gained acceptance after Galileo's observations and Kepler's laws of planetary motion. In the 20th century, the tidal theory was proposed, suggesting that the solar system formed from a passing star's gravitational pull on a nearby star, creating a protoplanetary disk.

During the 17th century, Copernicus proposed a heliocentric theory. He stated that the sun is at the center of the solar system, and the planets orbit around it. This theory was initially rejected but gained acceptance after Galileo's observations and Kepler's laws of planetary motion.

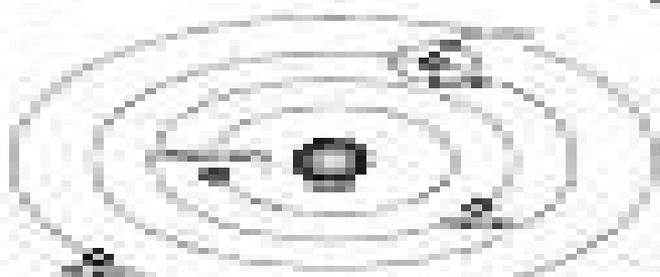

In the 20th century, the tidal theory was proposed. It suggests that the solar system formed from a passing star's gravitational pull on a nearby star, creating a protoplanetary disk. This theory is still being tested and refined.
