

EARLY WARNING SIGNS OF IT PROJECT FAILURE: THE DOMINANT DOZEN

By Tom Ichniowski, Director of IT Project Management at IBM

The dominant dozen consists of what IT project teams that consistently miss their goals consistently report as "early warning signs." This article details the top 12 signs, based on a project manager's perspective, based on "early warning signs" from 100 project teams at IBM's global service organization for IT project managers.

IT project managers are often faced with a variety of challenges that can lead to project failure. The dominant dozen consists of 12 early warning signs that project managers should watch for. These signs are: 1. Lack of clear goals and objectives, 2. Poor communication, 3. Inadequate resources, 4. Poor risk management, 5. Lack of stakeholder buy-in, 6. Poor change management, 7. Inadequate testing, 8. Poor documentation, 9. Lack of training, 10. Poor project management, 11. Poor team dynamics, and 12. Poor communication with stakeholders.

In addition, to help you understand what the signs are, I've included a list of 12 "early warning signs" that you can use to identify potential problems in your IT projects. The signs are: 1. Lack of clear goals and objectives, 2. Poor communication, 3. Inadequate resources, 4. Poor risk management, 5. Lack of stakeholder buy-in, 6. Poor change management, 7. Inadequate testing, 8. Poor documentation, 9. Lack of training, 10. Poor project management, 11. Poor team dynamics, and 12. Poor communication with stakeholders.

The project manager's responsibility is to identify and address these signs as early as possible. This can be done by regularly communicating with stakeholders, identifying risks, and ensuring that the project has the necessary resources and training. By doing so, you can avoid the common pitfalls of IT project failure and ensure that your project is successful.

IT project managers should be aware of these signs and take action to address them as early as possible.

1. Lack of clear goals and objectives: This is the most common sign of project failure. If you don't know what you're trying to achieve, you won't know how to get there. Make sure you have clear, measurable goals and objectives from the start.

2. Poor communication: Communication is key to any project. If you don't communicate effectively, you won't be able to coordinate your team or get the necessary buy-in from stakeholders. Make sure you have a clear communication plan and stick to it.

3. Inadequate resources: If you don't have the necessary resources (time, money, people), your project is doomed from the start. Make sure you have a realistic budget and that you have the necessary resources to complete the project.
