Chapter 10

In order to study chapter 10 of Price Theory, the following key concepts, events, and notable figures need to be understood:

Key Concepts:

- Incentives
- Opportunity cost
- Trade
- Specialization
- Comparative advantage

In order to understand incentives, students need to be able to identify and explain what motivates people to make certain choices. In other words, what are the benefits or rewards that people receive for making a particular choice? For example, someone may be more likely to go to work if they know they will receive a paycheck at the end of the week.

Opportunity cost is the cost of foregone alternatives. In other words, it is what you give up when you make a choice. For example, if you choose to go to college, you may have to give up working full-time in order to attend classes and study.

Trade is the exchange of goods and services between two or more parties. Trade can be between individuals, businesses, or countries. Specialization is the process of producing goods or services in which a person or group has a comparative advantage. Comparative advantage is the ability to produce a good or service at a lower opportunity cost than another person or group.

Chapter 11
