

DBCO - Learning Priority - Review Five Major Ocean Components (MOCOC)

Remember that there are three major components that make up the ocean environment: the water, the atmosphere, and the land. The water is the most important component because it is the most abundant and it is the most important for life. The atmosphere is the second most important because it is the most abundant and it is the most important for life. The land is the least important because it is the least abundant and it is the least important for life.
