The Media Revolution of Early Christianity Doron Mendels, 1999 Respected historian Doron Mendels poses a daring new theory that Eusebius's monumental Ecclesiastical History 325 C E was meant to serve as a publicity tool to further the cause of early Christianity Reading The Ecclesiastical History through the lenses of modern media studies Mendels argues that Eusebius viewed the spread of Christianity as a media revolution and invented a new type of history writing media history to promote it By carefully examining Eusebius's methods Mendels shows that Eusebius worked much like modern journalists do in selecting shaping and presenting stories for popular consumption

Borders and Borderlands in Contemporary Culture Aoileann Ní Éigeartaigh, David Getty, 2006 It is entirely appropriate that this book should be produced in Dundalk Located on the Northern rim of the Irish Pale this town has straddled a border for centuries Over the past thirty years it has come to be closely identified with violent Republicanism both by the Unionist community in Northern Ireland and by Constitutional Nationalists in the South Against such a hostile background academics attached to the Institute of Technology

there have bravely confronted and interrogated these processes which have so blighted the history not only of Dundalk but of places and spaces throughout the world similarly located In a wide ranging series of articles perhaps the strongest message to emerge is that of border as limitation The notion of border as a liminal space where worlds converge new realities emerge and transcendence is possible rarely surfaces Instead the border as a physical manifestation of divisiveness is repeatedly explored In a passionate statement of solidarity with the Palestinians Lavalette describes the construction of the apartheid wall oeThe wall is eight feet high and has a watchtower every three hundred metres Although there are no maps it is thought it could end up being close to one thousand kilometres in length by the time it is completed p 18 Yndigeegn shows how spatial borders gradually become mental borders such that as visual borders disappear new invisible borders appear p 33 The article explores the dualism of borders simultaneously protecting those inside from external threats while also preventing those inside from reaching or engaging with the outside world Ni Eigearthaigh takes up the duality theme in the exploration of individualism as a process either of liberation or one of alienation Taking the title from an aphorism of Kafka TM s oeMy Prison Cell My Fortress she explores a view of contemporary society as repressive and of its inhabitants as complicit in the repression Drawing on a wide span of literature and disciplines she teases through the paradox of contemporary society that the freedom gained from the liberation of the individual from communal obligations and repression has resulted in a loss of identity and an overwhelming sense of isolation and powerlessness She concludes that in the absence of a restrictive system of social control the individual is forced to take responsibility for his own actions It is to avoid this responsibility that many choose the security of the prison cell above the hardship of the outside world Her paper does not go on to look at the potential role of the State or of fundamentalist movements in playing on the fear and disconnectedness of the citizenry as an equally likely outcome to that of a stronger capability for personal responsibility One could argue for instance that the European Fascist movement and the Nationalist movement of the early to mid twentieth century were both based precisely on the dislocation at personal and social level resulting from the breakdown of pre industrial communitarian ties While there is no attempt in the book to elucidate any particular developmental relationship between the different contributors two broad themes may be detected a concern with borders as socio political and geographical constructs on the one hand and a concern with the formation of identity in the individual TM s relationship to the wider society on the other Some light is cast on the latter issue by de Gregorio Godeo who posits discourse as a core concept in identity formation This leads to the conclusion that individual identity in this case individualism is in fact socially constructed in a oedialectical interplay between the discursive and the social identities included so that they are mutually shaped by each other p 93 Using critical discourse analysis he goes on to explore changing notions of masculinity as evidenced in the Health sections of men TM s magazines

Linguistics grade Excellent with honor course Critical Discourse Analysis language English abstract The present paper has shown the practical part of CDA according to three scholars namely they are Norman Fairclough Ruth Wodak and Teun van Dijk Their approaches are somehow different in method and way of interpretation While Fairclough is brought up on the systemic functional model of theory and thus often concentrates on rather limited amounts of research material Wodak turns to sociolinguistics and ethnography with an emphasis on corpus based research and on work with different approaches with a variety of empirical data as well as background information However the notion that language is inherently social remains a key assumption in both approaches On the other hand similarly to Fairclough van Dijk acknowledges three different perspectives text discourse practice and sociocultural practice and emphasizes on the link between textual analysis and sociocultural analysis However van Dijk differentiates himself from both Fairclough and Wodak in his understanding of social events or of social institutions and power relations To van Dijk social cognitions mediate between micro and macro levels of society between discourse and action between the individual and the group Therefore the focus on social cognition governs the process of analysis
