Abstract—We have proposed an integrated Web-based online admission system using multi-agent systems and Web-based technologies. Every year, most of the Universities have to organise centralised admission for under-graduate courses of its affiliated colleges. The centralised online admission system is a major reforms initiative in education sector to bring about greater transparency, efficiency and accountability in complicated and time-consuming admission process. It encompasses every institution under the university to accomplish the admission process where potential student community is involved. As a result of various agents' involvement in the whole process, coordination and communication among them are the core issue which can be efficiently handled in a multi-agent environment. Thus dynamic behaviours of the agents reveal better results. Multi-agent systems represent a new paradigm for the development of distributed software. Preliminary implementation issues for this system have been discussed with Java Agent Development Environment Technology, a java-based software platform that provides middleware-layer functionalities which facilitate the development of agent-based application, at the end of the paper.

Index Terms—Online Admission Process, Higher Educational Institutions, Agent-based Technology, Multi-Agent Systems.

I. INTRODUCTION

During admission season, students as well as their parents queue at multiple colleges located at different places to collect admission forms to study at under-graduate level. Subsequently they have to follow same methodology to submit the forms. Again they have to hop from one college to another to know their position in the merit list physically as well as to complete admission process in the college where they get chance to study. This period of admission becomes a tiresome, hectic and troublesome for the students and their parents.

As information gathered from the University of Bardwan regarding admission process, problems not only can be seen from the student's perspective but also from colleges as well as of the University. Every institute incurs expenses for printing admission-related documents such as application form, brochure, etc. whose quantity is imaginary as the volume of applicants is totally unknown to the authority concern when order for printing is placed for the same. Thus the wastage of materials is easily foreseen.

Secondly, unnecessary and prolong involvement of manpower for distribution of forms, handling redundant queries, collecting filled-in forms, manually scrutinising the data given in the forms against documents submitted, generating merit list, etc. makes this admission process complicated and error-prone.

Thirdly, constant updating of merit lists at regular interval becomes a headache for both the authorities as it is a repetitive manual computational task and the applicants as they have to visit again and again to check their latest position in the merit list.

In general perspective, every year the universities are receiving complaints about the difficulties being faced by students seeking admission to affiliated colleges from every sections of the society. It has become an absolute necessary, for the well-being of the society, to make this admission process hassle-free and transparent for the benefit of all the stakeholders involved in this admission process.

As the required centralised online admission system need to be developed under the supervision of the university based task force comprising of experts from university as well as from the colleges, a comprehensive scope has to be framed to enable conduct of online admission. Thus it ensures uniform admission directives for central online admission system.

For the design of online admission system, several factors such as the number of colleges, subjects/ subjects combination on offer by different colleges, number of seats, number of courses/combination of subjects an applicant may apply for, fee structure, etc. are the vital information that are to be incorporated in the system for successful execution of the process.

Keeping in view the above short-comings and challenges, in the manual and existing online admission process, the proposed Multi-Agent System (MAS) based
