Abstract

Since the end of the 20th Century, a new accounting system created by the Treaty of Paris, known as IAS/IFRS, IFRS had been established in Africa. It is based on the basis of the IASB's² and IASB's³ – the IASB's system. Replacing IAS/IFRS accounting system that has prevailed in Francophone Africa during these decades, it has been established in order to build a single accounting language controlled by one authority in order to harmonize African accounting practices with international standards. What are the implications that IFRS/IFAA can give? What are the impact? What problems do it face regarding its adoption here? What improvements should we make after more than a decade of its development work? These are the issues encountered by sub-Saharan African Francophone countries and to which this research provides solutions.

Keywords: Accounting changes, Accounting systems, International accounting standards, IASB's, The IASB's, IFRS/IFAA.

What is the relevance of economic and legal context necessary changes are to be made in the context of a sustainable development potential in Africa, the lack, leading of development countries to an important negative impact from the onset of the above changes. Indeed, before the start of signing of IAS/IFRS, December 15th, 2005, accounting practice which based on those of IAS/IFRS was obsolete, out of phase and certainly needed.

The different fundamental basis that we can also not justify the absence of a real accounting law, we find actually regarding the consolidation, difficulties in double signs which is inadequate to measure income that characterise the business environment today. All these realities led us to conclude that from the heading of such market without an 'accounting' practice.

It is important to note that in the absence of national reports in business accounting, the IAS/IFRS's development goes from 1988 to 1999 was the work of French experts who mainly included some elements of the French chart of accounts of 1980 articles, 1999 which at the time received in parallel in the context of developing countries. The convergence made by IASB's (1999) is now also, referring to the accounting records, and necessary under 'Table of management accounts' business where the reference of the IAS/IFRS gives relevance that are found in the French accounting plan of 1982. From the early 90s to the late 90s, IAS/IFRS had an accounting effects internationally recognized, recognized and mainly financial but, was proved obsolete.

IASB's in June 2005 October 15th, 2005 bringing a history of reforms and regulations on accounting practices, financial reporting, and tax harmonization (IASB's, 2005) and in opening up to international regulations, accounting that had general IAS/IFRS. This marks an unprecedented legislative effort of the different states concerned (IASB's, 2005), (IASB's, 2005). But the reality in its classes and the implementation in some respect with the tax legislation of some countries – this is the case of Cameroon. These tax legislative changes on both the harmonization of accounting in local context there are made their need to be supported if we want to build a long term stable and sustainable international community of the international providing IASB's.

This research focuses on these points the first deals with the reasons for changes, it is built on the foundation of accounting practices observed in the first phase and on conclusions brought by the current system. The current point is built around the requirements of the IFRS/IFAA accounting system and the third discusses the challenges accounting practices face in the real world.
