Abstract

Selecting the methodological approach is a critical decision as it largely determines the effectiveness of the research. Encapsulating the research approach as a chapter in a thesis is often a challenge to many young researchers, despite the abundance of guides on PhD thesis writing and on the various approaches to research methodologies. However, most guides are descriptive and fail to provide appropriate illustrations of a methodology chapter especially in qualitative research. In a qualitative methodology chapter, key factors are the assumptions, theoretical lens, and worldviews on the topic, making qualitative methodology chapter less definite, more subjective and lacks a conventional model. This chapter addresses the need for qualitative research samples and aims to advance the understanding of writing a qualitative research methodology chapter by providing essential guidelines. The guidelines are drawn from an actual qualitative research methodology chapter of a PhD thesis in the field of tourism and social cohesion.

Keywords: Qualitative research, methodology chapter, drafting a PhD thesis, case study, Interpretivist paradigm, tourism

1. Introduction

Choosing a methodological approach for any research is a significant decision made in a research process, as the strength of the study is reflected through it. The challenge is in understanding how this choice is made. On one hand, there is a relationship between the purpose of the research and research methodology, suggesting one approach to research should not be seen as superior to the other. This advocates that the chosen approach and methodology should suit the 'paradigm relativism' for the study. Alternatively, the choice of research approach also depends on the researcher's beliefs and philosophical foundation. A methodology chapter of a thesis details and justifies the choice. However, very few examples of a qualitative methodology chapter exist. Therefore, this chapter aims to advance the understanding of needed contents in a qualitative research methodology chapter and provide guidelines in writing a qualitative research methodology chapter using an illustration.

2. Literature Review

Qualitative research is interesting, highly rewarding and used to explore diverse aspects of social world, through experiences, imaginings of respondents or observers, context of intuitions, discourses, social practices and relationships in the process of generating meanings (Lynch, 2014). This approach looks at reality as socially and subjectively constructed (Lynch, 2014). Strengths of this approach include; insider's view that is achieved through the closer involvement of the researcher; even issues that can be missed by positivist inquiries can be noted; and owing to the descriptive and narrative style of qualitative research, it can provide new insights and play a significant role in suggesting causes, effects, relationships and vital processes (Denzin & Lincoln, 2018). It is exploratory by definition itself, undertaken in natural settings and tends to interpret phenomena in the meanings brought by people to the study (Denzin & Lincoln, 2018). Philosophical foundations are underpinning for qualitative research and influences the research practice in terms of approaches, research designs and methods
