

A* A-LEVEL BIOLOGY TOPIC 2 NOTES

CELLS

How do transport work for this example?

1. Surface ions are actively transported on the back, into the blood, by the gulliver.
2. Maintaining a concentration gradient of potassium ions in lumen than in cell.
3. Surface ions and glucose move by facilitated diffusion from the lumen, into a space.
4. Creating a concentration gradient of all glucose in epithelial cell than blood.
5. Glucose moves out of cell into blood through a protein channel.

Diagram showing the absorption of water

Water potential

Definition: High movement of water molecules across water potential gradient. They point water always

Water potential = the likelihood ('potential') of water

- Pure water has the highest water potential (0 kJ mol⁻¹)
- Adding solutes to a solution lowers the water potential
- Measured in kilojoules mol⁻¹
- Can be denoted by the symbol ψ

How about osmosis

- Osmosis = no ATP / energy required
- Factors affecting rate = surface area, water potential difference, thickness of exchange surface / diffusion distance

Application example

Red blood cells contain a variety of solutes dissolved

- If a red blood cell is placed in pure water, it will gain water potential than pure water
- The cell surface membrane will break and burst the cell

- However, if a red blood cell is placed in a solution of pure water, water will leave the cell by osmosis
- The cell shrinks and becomes crenated

Key takeaway point: Water will always move to a cell

Diagram showing red blood cells in different solutions

Antibodies

Remember the definition of an antibody

Antibody: A protein, specific to an antigen, which

Structure of antibodies - key points

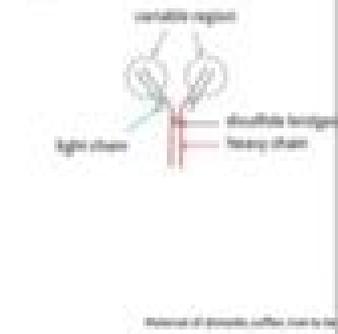

- Quaternary structural protein (links to 1.1.4.2)
- Composed of 4 polypeptide chains (2 heavy and 2 light) joined together by disulphide bridges
- Each chain has a specific amino acid sequence
- Each chain has a specific amino acid sequence

Exam question example

Describe and explain how the structure of an antibody

- Specific structure of protein = importance of primary structure
- This determines the position of disulphide bonds, which
- which determines the specific shape of the binding site
- Quaternary structure = 4 polypeptide chains held together by disulphide bridges
- Each chain has a specific amino acid sequence
- Each chain has a specific amino acid sequence

Diagram of an antibody

Meiosis

The stage of the cell cycle where the cell spends most of its time in G1, replicating DNA at the start (this is about as much as you need to know) for your comprehensive introduction look 1.1.5.2

- During meiosis, in addition to DNA replication, these processes are also occurring
- DNA replication
 - Protein synthesis
 - Replication of organelles

But this is beyond the scope of A level and the amount of detail you would be required to know - so don't worry about learning that

Meiosis

Parent cell 'divides' into two in the G1 phase into two cells

Results in the formation of two genetically identical daughter cells

Stage of mitosis = 100%

Chromosome transcription: Mitosis is not actually the process where the cell divides into two daughter cells. Rather,

Mitosis is the process of the cell, sucking into two genetically identical cells again

Stages of mitosis

- Prophase: Key main points
- Chromosomes condense, becoming shorter and thicker (they appear as two sister chromatids, joined by a centromere)
 - Chromosomes become visible under a microscope
 - Nuclear envelope breaks down and genetic material is exposed
 - Spindle fibres form the spindle apparatus (needed for later stages)

- Metaphase: Key main points
- Chromosomes align along the equator / middle of the cell
 - Spindle fibres attach to chromosomes by their centromeres
