Writing a technical note

ABSTRACT

A technical note is a short article giving a brief description of a specific development, technique or procedure, or it may describe a modification of an existing technique, procedure or device applicable to medicine. The technique, procedure or device described should have practical value and should contribute to clinical diagnosis or management. It could also present a software tool, or an experimental or computational method. Technical notes are variously referred to as technical innovations or technical developments. The main criteria for publication will be the novelty of concepts involved, the validity of the technique and its potential for clinical applications.

INTRODUCTION

A technical note is a short article which briefly describes a specific development, technique or procedure. It may also refer to the modification of a technique, procedure or device applicable to medicine. Technical notes could also present a software tool, or an experimental or computational method. The technique or method described may either be completely new, or may offer an improved version of an existing technique. It should describe a demonstrable advancement on what is currently available. The technique should be well-tested and should preferably provide a solution to a clinical problem and have some demonstrable practical values.

As a technical note is one of the many types of papers that are published in medical journals, authors need to be aware of the specific requirements for submitting this article type. Not all journals publish this category of article. Whether technical notes are published in a particular journal will depend on the mission of that journal and the vision of its editor. Similar to all other manuscript types, the submitted manuscript for a technical note should also be constructed exactly according to the prescribed guidelines set by the target journal, which can usually be found in the journal's Instructions to Authors.^{1,2} Authors should note that the main criteria for publication are the novelty of concepts involved, the validity of the technique and its potential for clinical applications.

Various journals have different names for technical notes. Some journals may refer to them as technical innovations or technical developments. For example, in some ophthalmology journals, technical notes are known as innovations, where manuscripts submitted in this category should describe innovative techniques in any field of ophthalmology, including ophthalmic surgery, drugs, optics and devices. Any relevant preclinical and clinical data should be included.

In some imaging journals, technical notes are known as technical developments. This is a brief description of new imaging techniques, procedures or equipment. These studies are commonly exploratory feasibility studies.

STRUCTURE OF A TECHNICAL NOTE

The structure of a technical note generally follows that of a generic scientific paper. Technical notes should consist of the following headings: short abstract (structured or unstructured), brief introduction, methods, results and discussion. The methods and results sections may be combined under the heading of "technique". The maximum number of words, as well as figures and tables, are usually specified in the target journal's Instructions to Authors.

Box 1. Structure of a technical note:

- Abstract (structured or unstructured)
- Introduction
- Methods and results (separate or combined)
- Discussion
- Acknowledgements (optional)
- References
