

Q.2a. With neat diagrams explain the configuration of a step-by-step switching system.

Ans:

The schematic diagram for such an exchange is given in Fig. Each subscriber is connected to a single rotary pre-selector switch at the exchange, the outputs from this switch being connected to a bank of two-motion switches known as 'group selectors'. The out-puts from the pre-selector switches of a whole group of subscribers are connected together in parallel as that group of subscribers share a single bank of group selectors. When a subscriber lifts his telephone, the cradle switch causes a circuit to be completed back to the telephone exchange, signaling that the subscriber wishes to make a call. This causes the pre-selector switch to step around until it finds a free group selector. The pre-selector switch then stop in this position and the group selector is 'seized' by the subscriber wishing to make a call.

On seizing the group selector, the subscriber dials his first digit and the selector switch moves up to the appropriate row on the switch contact array. Each final selector has the possibility of connection to 100 lines. The 1000 lines are therefore divided into 10 groups of 100 each, the group being identified by the first digit in the subscriber's number. The vertical motion of the group selector therefore selects a final selector in the group associated with the first digit dialed. Each individual row of contacts, or levels, of the group selector is connected to a bank of final selectors associated with a particular group of 100 line numbers. Having dialed the first digit to select the appropriate group, the group selector arm then automatically rotates in the vertical direction until it finds a free final selector. In the final selector, both directions of motion are under the control of the subscriber's dial and, after dialing two further digits, connection is established, providing the called subscriber's to answer his telephone.

b. List the basic functions of a switching system.
