

A GUIDE TO THE MAILLARD REACTION

The Maillard reaction occurs during cooking, and it is responsible for the non-enzymatic browning of foods when cooked. It actually consists of a number of reactions, and can occur at room temperature, but is optimal between 140-165°C. The Maillard reaction occurs in three stages, detailed here.

1 The carbonyl group on a sugar reacts with a protein or amino acid's amino group, producing an N-substituted glycoylamine.

2 The glycoylamine compound generated in the first step isomerises, by undergoing Amadori rearrangement, to give a ketosamine.

3 The ketosamine can react in a number of ways to produce a range of different products, which themselves can react further.

Classes of Maillard Reaction Products

The Maillard reaction produces hundreds of products; a small subset of these contribute to flavour and aroma, some groups of which are described below. Melanoidins are also formed; brown, polymeric substances which contribute to the colouration of many cooked foods.
