E. Zitney, 2006 This paper highlights the use of the CAPE OPEN CO standard interfaces in the Advanced Process Engineering Co Simulator APECS developed at the National Energy Technology Laboratory NETL The APECS system uses the CO unit operation thermodynamic and reaction interfaces to provide its plug and play co simulation capabilities including the integration of process simulation with computational fluid dynamics CFD

simulation APECS also relies heavily on the use of a CO COM CORBA bridge for running process CFD co simulations on multiple operating systems For process optimization in the face of multiple and some time conflicting objectives APECS offers stochastic modeling and multi objective optimization capabilities developed to comply with the CO software standard At NETL system analysts are applying APECS to a wide variety of advanced power generation systems ranging from small fuel cell systems to commercial scale power plants including the coal fired gasification based FutureGen power and hydrogen production plant
