Strings of Natural Languages Markus Stengel,2008-04-01 Learning a second language is often difficult One major reason for this is the way we learn We try to translate the words and concepts of the other language into those of our own language As long as the languages are fairly similar this works quite well However when the languages differ to a great degree problems are bound to appear For example to someone whose first language is French English is not difficult to learn In fact he can pick up any English book and at the very least recognize words and sentences But if he is tasked with reading a Japanese text he will be completely lost No familiar letters no whitespace and only occasionally a glyph that looks similar to a punctuation mark appears Nevertheless anyone can learn any language Correct pronunciation and understanding alien utterances may be hard for the individual but as soon as the words are transcribed to some kind of script they can be studied and given some time understood The script thus offers itself as a reliable medium of communication Sometimes the script can be very complex though For instance the Japanese language is not much more difficult than German but the Japanese script is If someone untrained in the language is given a Japanese book and told to create a list of its vocabulary he will likely have to succumb to the task Or does he not Are there maybe ways to analyze the text regardless of his unfamiliarity with this type of script and language Should there not be characteristics shared by all languages which can be exploited This thesis assumes the point of view of such a person and shows how to segment a corpus in an unfamiliar language while employing as little previous knowledge as possible To this end a methodology for the analysis of unknown languages is developed The single requirement made is that a large corpus in electronic form which underwent only a minimum of preprocessing is available Analysis is limited strictly to the expression level Interpreter-mediated Police Interviews I. Nakane,2014-07-12 This book shows how participation of interpreters as mediators changes the dynamics of police interviews particularly with regard to power struggles and competing versions of events The analysis of interaction offers insights into language in the legal process
