

Calorimetry Lab (aka "Burn Lab")

Goggles must be worn at all times!

Introduction:

By burning pieces of food, the chemical energy stored in molecular bonds is released as heat and light. The heat can be measured in units called Calories (Joules is a unit that also measures heat, but isn't used in the food industry). The more Calories a food contains, the more heat is given off when burned. Foods high in Calories will release large amounts of energy. One gram of a protein will release far fewer Calories than one gram of fat.

A calorie is the amount of heat (energy) required to increase the temperature of 1 gram of water by 1 °C. This process is the basis of the technique of calorimetry. In this lab investigation, you will use the methods of calorimetry to approximate the amount of energy contained in a potato chip and/ or other food items. The heat given off from the reaction will be absorbed by water that is suspended above the burning food item. This method indirectly measures the amount of heat given off by the food.

Purpose:

- To calculate how many calories of energy/ serving food items contain & compare to real number as determined by the manufacturer.
- Determine how this experiment can be improved to provide more accurate results.

Materials:

- Test tube & holder
- Ring stand
- Thermometer & Clamp
- matches
- Evaporating dish
- matches
- Food items
- 2 Paper clips

Procedure:

1. Suspend your food item above the evaporating dish using 2 paper clips. The paper clips will be stretched out to resemble "railroad tracks" and will serve as a platform for your food.
2. Measure the mass of the potato chip & also the evaporating dish/ paper clips set-up prior to burning it. Record in data table
3. Using a graduated cylinder, measure 15 mL of distilled water and pour in into the test tube. Record the mass of H<sub>2</sub>O in the data table (remember.. 1 mL of H<sub>2</sub>O= 1 g).
4. Place the chip in the evaporating dish at the base of the ring stand. Adjust the test tube height so that it will be directly above the chip. Insert a thermometer into the water and secure.
5. Measure and record the initial temperature of the water.
6. Momentarily move the chip/dish out from under the test tube. Use a match to ignite the bottom of the chip and then put the burning chip back under the test tube. The idea is to get as much of the heat from the burning chip to rise up and heat the water in the test tube.
7. With a stirring rod, stir the water in the test tube while the chip burns. Measure the highest temperature of the water and record it in the data table. Re-light chip if it goes out.
8. Measure the final mass of the "chip/ ash" in the evaporating dish after burning. Record data.
9. Repeat steps 1-7 using a different food item.
