

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a complex of organs in which foods, beverages, and other nutrients are broken down into smaller molecules that can be absorbed into the bloodstream. The process begins in the mouth, where food is chewed and mixed with saliva. The resulting bolus is then swallowed and moves down the esophagus into the stomach. In the stomach, food is further broken down and mixed with gastric juices. The resulting chyme then moves into the small intestine, where most of the digestion and absorption of nutrients occurs. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. The ileum ends at the ileocecal junction, where it meets the large intestine. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. The sigmoid colon leads to the rectum and anal canal, where the waste is eliminated from the body.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

The liver, pancreas, and gallbladder are accessory organs of the digestive system. The liver is the largest organ in the body and is responsible for producing bile, which is used to emulsify fats in the small intestine. The pancreas is a gland that produces pancreatic juice, which contains enzymes that help to break down carbohydrates, proteins, and fats. The gallbladder is a small sac that stores bile until it is needed in the small intestine.

Layers of large intestine

Large intestine

The large intestine is the final part of the digestive system. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. The sigmoid colon leads to the rectum and anal canal, where the waste is eliminated from the body.

Peristaltic action

Peristaltic action is the process by which the digestive system moves food through the tract. It is a series of involuntary, rhythmic muscle contractions that push the contents of the digestive tract along. The contractions are coordinated by the autonomic nervous system.

The mouth & salivary glands

The mouth is the starting point of the digestive system. It is where food is broken down into smaller pieces and mixed with saliva. The salivary glands, which are located in the mouth, produce saliva, which contains enzymes that help to break down carbohydrates. The mouth is also where the tongue is located, which helps to move food around and swallow it.

The stomach

The stomach is a muscular organ that is responsible for breaking down food into smaller pieces and mixing it with gastric juices. The stomach is divided into four parts: the cardia, the fundus, the body, and the pylorus. The cardia is the opening of the stomach into the esophagus. The fundus is the upper part of the stomach. The body is the middle part of the stomach. The pylorus is the lower part of the stomach, which leads to the small intestine.

Small intestine

The small intestine is the longest part of the digestive system. It is responsible for most of the digestion and absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. The duodenum is the first part of the small intestine, where it receives chyme from the stomach. The jejunum is the middle part of the small intestine. The ileum is the last part of the small intestine, which ends at the ileocecal junction.

Absorption

Absorption is the process by which nutrients are taken up by the cells of the digestive tract. It occurs in the small intestine, where the nutrients are broken down into their simplest form. The nutrients are then absorbed into the bloodstream through the villi of the small intestine.
