Abstract. In this paper we investigate the performance of IEEE 802.11b ad hoc networks by means of an experimental study. An extensive literature, based on simulation studies, there exists on the performance of IEEE 802.11 ad hoc networks. Our analysis reveals several aspects that are usually neglected in previous simulation studies. Firstly, since different transmission rates are used for control and data frames, different transmission ranges and carrier-sensing ranges may exist at the same time in the network. In addition, the transmission ranges are in practice much shorter than usually assumed in simulation analysis, not constant but highly variable (even in the same session) and depends on several factors. Finally, the results presented in this paper indicate that for correctly understanding the behavior of an 802.11b network operating in ad hoc mode, several different ranges must be considered. In addition to the transmission range, the physical carrier sensing range is very important. The transmission range is highly dependent on the data rate and is up to 100 m, while the physical carrier sensing range is almost independent from the data rate and is approximately 200 m. Furthermore, even though stations are outside from their respective physical carrier sensing range, they may still interfere if their distance is lower than 350 m.

1 Introduction

The IEEE 802.11 technology [IEE02] is a good platform to implement single-hop ad hoc networks because of its extreme simplicity. Single-hop means that stations must be within the same transmission radius (say 100-200 meters) to be able to communicate. This limitation can be overcome by multi-hop ad hoc networking. This requires the addition of routing mechanisms at stations so that they can forward packets towards the intended destination, thus extending the range of the ad hoc network beyond the transmission radius of the source station. Routing solutions designed for wired networks (e.g., the Internet) are not suitable for the ad hoc environment, primarily due to the dynamic topology of ad hoc networks. Even though large-scale multi-hop ad hoc networks will not be available in the near future, on smaller scales, mobile ad hoc networks are starting to appear thus extending the range of the IEEE 802.11 technology over multiple radio hops.
