Headteacher Stress, Coping, and Health Alistair Ostell, Susan Oakland, 1995 This study investigates how headteachers react to and attempt to cope with stressful work situations It examines the factors influencing their success or otherwise at handling problems and factors affecting headteacher health The questionnaire and semi structured interview schedule used in the study could be adapted by anyone undertaking similar research Analysis shows that the recent and unprecedented changes in education are a major difficulty for headteachers and that external resource adequacy is a significant determinant of situational outcomes Analyses also reveal that the headteachers psychological health is significantly poorer than that of comparable groups and more closely approximates the health of unemployed subjects Two cognitive styles are identified in coping research as powerful predictors of psychological health and physical symptoms The results are discussed in relation to management and cognitive behavioural training for headteachers and modifying current methodologies for studying stress and coping The Lancet ,1996-05 Australian Family Physician ,2007 Organizational Psychology Philip James Stone,Mark Cannon,1997 Medical Journal of Australia ,1994 Indian Journal of Medical Research ,2007 Nutrition Abstracts and Reviews ,2006 American Journal of Public Health ,2008 The Psychology of Happiness Michael Argyle,1987 Studie over de sociologische en psychologische factoren die een rol spelen bij de mens om zich gelukkig te voelen Psychiatric Epidemiology Juan E.
